formations of American heavy bombers carried the unprecedented aerial offensive through its sixth day with smashes today at aircraft production plants at Regensburg, Stuttgart and other targets.The heavy daylight assault carried on the mighty offensive after the Royal Air Force had taken up the two-way scourge of Nazi plane production last night, smashing at Schweinfurt with bombers based in Britain and at Steyr, Austria, with formations from Italy.Both Schweinfurt and Steyr were already burning from yesterday's two-way attack by American heavy bombers based in Britain and Italy.Heavy Fighter Escort.
Today's strong forces of American four-engined bombers were protected by swarms of Allied fighters as they attacked the aircraft works at Regensburg and the ball bearing works at Stuttgart.Returning crews, who said the bombings were done visually, reported good results.All targets of the daylight assault were deep inside Germany, the attack on Regensburg, in Southern Germany, requiring a roundtrip flight of more than 1100 miles.The big Liberators and Flying Fortresses drove 450 miles inside Europe to Regensburg, in Southwestern Germany.Regensburg was last raided on Feb. 22 by the American Fifteenth
Air Force, which hit the city's war plants with the greatest fleet of heavy bombers ever launched from the Italian theater.Indicating that today's assaults may have been joined by Italy-based bombers for the third two-way punch within 24 hours, the Berlin radio said American formations had entered the Reich from the south. Violent aerial battles accompanied the daylight thrusts, the broadcast added.The night-riding R. A. F. bombers were guided to both targets by the flaming wreckage left only a few hours before by the American daylight raiders. The British bombers added still further damage to Schweinfurt's sprawling ball bearing plants and to the German aircraft factory at Steyr, in old Austria.156 Nazis Shot Down.

improved its positions, it was anon Mount Abate, a mile and a many's Transocean news agency broadcast today that Nazi troops have evacuated the great stronghold of Vitebsk in White Russia, to fall back toward the old Polish frontier 70 miles to the west.The German high command's communiqué, which usually reports on the previous day's operations, but confirmed an earlier

Berlin announcement—also made by Moscow—that Russian troops had taken Rogachev, 150 miles south of Vitebsk.The Moscow radio said tonight that Russian forces advancing on toward Pskov on the Baltic front, had captured more than 40 villages west and south of fallen Dno.The broadcast communiqué made no mention of Vitebsk. Moscow said the Soviet offensive was continued north of Rogachev, where "several populated places" had been captured.In the Kholm area, which is also on the Baltic front south of Dno, the Russians said their forces had captured additional villages.The Russians did not claim Vitebsk's capture, but Moscow army authorities asserted that the Nazis' Rogachev-Vitebsk line, one of the strongest on the Russian front, is smashed. Soviet troops streamed across the ice of the Dnieper River which formed a large part of the line, dispatches

Transocean said Vitebsk, im-railways and under attack by Red was evacuated only after bitter fighting.The capture of Rogachev and the reported fall of Vitebsk—the former a rail town 15 miles north of the Vitebsk-Gomel junction, the latter a junction of the Vitebsk-Gomel and Gomel-Minsk railways—indicates a Red Army offensive aimed at the White Russia capital of Minsk, less than 100 miles west of the nearest Soviet lines on this rapidly changing front.Red Army troops for weeks have been astride the railway be-

ABOARD THE AMERICAN REPATRIATION TRAIN IN SPAIN, Feb. 25 (AP).—American diplomats, newspaper men, wounded soldiers and civilians were on neutral ground at last today, bound for Lisbon and freedom after internment for more than a year on German soil.

The party of 644 persons, which also included a number of Latin-American diplomats, was to arrive in Lisbon today and be exchanged for 1180 Germans and French arriving on the Swedish liner Gripsholm.

Before crossing into Spain, both the North American and South American groups were sealed in their hotels in Biarritz with German soldiers standing on guard, in contrast to their treatment in Germany, where nobody attempted to escape with kid gloves. Apparently the Germans feared the Americans would receive information as to the state of affairs in France.

Train Drafty, Cold.
The Germans also appeared hampered by a shortage of rail equipment, for the railway cars used to make up the evacuation trains were ancient day coaches and a large number of repatriates became ill from sitting in the drafty, under-heated coaches.

Persons aboard the train with relatives in France had arranged with the Berlin Foreign Office to meet their Parisian relatives during a halt at a suburb of Paris. However, they were not allowed on the platform as the result of a number of scenes the day before, when French visitors to the Latin-American diplomatic train became so demonstrative the authorities intervened.

Wearily, ill and irritated as they were, the repatriates nevertheless passed the time discussing Germany's position in France and agreeing on indications that the German Army was suffering a bad case of nerves. It was also noted that many of the German soldiers guarding the hotels were boys no more than 17 years old.

Preparations for Invasion.
The last view we had of Nazi-held territory were scenes at Biarritz, where we saw rolls of barbed wire ready to be thrown across the straits leading to the sea. Coastal defenses fired practice rounds, German planes circled overhead and there were posted warnings of mine fields in the Bay of Biscay.

The biggest section of the United States party consisted of 154 diplomatic, consular, press and relief work representatives. Among them were Pinkney Tuck, United States Charge d'Affaires at Vichy and Mrs. Tuck; Douglas MacArthur, nephew of Gen. MacArthur, who was a secretary of the embassy; Taylor Henry, chief of the Associated Press bureau at Vichy; Philip W. I. Whitcomb, correspondent of the Baltimore Sun; his French wife and their two-month-old baby.

In addition, there were 37 wounded American soldiers, mostly aviators shot down over Germany; 18 Red Cross workers, headed by Edward G. Sparrow; 18 Quaker relief workers under Burrett M. Hyatt, Ohio industrialist, and 125 Latin-American representatives.

Among the American wounded was Lt. James Quinn of Fort Smith, Ark. The flyers said they received good hospital care in Germany and aboard the train. But as one remarked, "Quakers will be good to see real American nurses."

Treaty Useless to France.
Time more or less stood still for us during our internment. Only recently it seemed we stood on the streets of Vichy on Armistice day, 1942, and saw German troops occupy Marshal Petain's capital—a city supposedly protected by terms of another agreement which Hitler tore up that morning. For two years we witnessed a treaty—the French-German armistice agreement—serving its purpose for the Germans but morally and materially disarming the French.

We were held in Lourdes until Jan. 15, 1943, when we were sent to the de luxe Brenner Park Hotel at Baden-Baden. There we were joined by the Quakers. Later, consular personnel seized by the Germans in Tunisia began drifting in.

Truk Defenses Weak; Battleship Moved Close to Sink Jap Cruiser

UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Feb. 25 (AP).—First eye-witness accounts of the bold two-day attack Feb. 16-17 on Japan's naval base of Truk disclosed that United States battleships moved in close enough to shell and sink an enemy cruiser.

Naval officers who participated in the stroke, which obviously surprised and stunned the Japanese, also made these pertinent disclosures:

Japanese air opposition was considerably weaker than had been expected.

Antiaircraft fire came largely from cruisers, rather than from Japan's vaunted ground defenses at that Caroline Islands bastion.

Although Truk, its fortifications valued for some time by visitors, was reputed to be an extensive self-sustaining naval base, only one floating drydock was observed.

Japanese warships, instead of moving out to challenge the powerful American task force, tried to flee north.

Japs "Just Flew Around."
"The general impression I had was that those Japs were ferry pilots taking planes through and not caught," said Lt. Comdr. Harry W. Harrison, 35 years old, of Miami Beach, Fla., fighter squadron commander on one of the aircraft carriers.

"All they did was fly around and let us shoot them. They probably never expected to have a fight at Truk."

Harrison added that after the first day's attack on Truk, "I saw only nine of about 30 ships left afloat in the anchorage, and three of them were burning."

"Official announcements on the raid previously have reported at least 19 enemy ships, including two cruisers and three destroyers, were definitely sunk, seven others probably sunk and 201 planes were shot down."

Blasting of Cruiser.
Destruction of the Japanese cruiser by battleship guns was described by Lt. Comdr. Donald B. Ingerslew, 28, of Trenton, Mo., and Lt. Comdr. William G. Privette of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, who with Harrison have just returned to Pearl Harbor from the Truk operation.

The cruiser with three other warships, fled through the north kept isolated as much as possible from the townspeople, most of whom showed themselves friendly in the few contacts we had with them.

Much the worse was the mental isolation, especially the prohibition of the use of radios, cutting us off from the outside world.

University-in-Exile.
The internees established a sort of university-in-exile at Baden Baden which offered 168 courses under 50 instructors. The courses ranged from ballet, accounting, drawing, philosophy and chess to philology, first aid, geopolitics and eight languages.

Taylor Henry was the professor in algebra, and he made up his own problems as he went along. The university also took charge of educating the eight children of school age.

The educational program was organized by Whitcomb, one of the three persons interned at Baden Baden just after Pearl Harbor. After being released at Lisbon in May, 1942, he doubled back to meet his pretty French fiancée who had been left behind. They were married in the unoccupied zone, only to be caught in the second internment when the Allies invaded French North Africa.

When their child was born two months before we left, a French doctor assisted after the Germans had refused to attend the case.

1000-Volume Library.
At Baden Baden also were a library of 1000 English volumes directed by Mrs. Herbert G. King of Chicago, wife of the United Press Correspondent; a dramatic program directed by Henry, who also was "dean" of the university's faculty of literature; an efficient medical service under Dr. Harold M. Stuart, internationally known child specialist from Boston; a competitive sports program under Col. Robert Scow of Elmhurst, Ill., and Tulsa, Ok., the military attaché; and a varied entertainment program organized by Roderic Davison, Princeton instructor, and myself.

Henry and I wrote and produced a detective play and musical opera respectively.

At Lourdes, before we were interned at Baden Baden, a humorous newspaper was issued under the name of Lourdes Idle Rumor.

In Baden Baden a wall newspaper, Das Badenews, was published. No official distinctions among internees were accepted from the Germans. Tuck made the trip from Baden Baden in a day coach with the rest of the men, leaving

JAP DESTROYER, TROOP SHIP SUNK OFF NEW IRELAND

73 of 400 Soldiers on Transport Captured — Kavieng, Duke of York Islands Shelled.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Feb. 25 (AP).—American destroyers have sunk two more Japanese merchant vessels and a destroyer off New Ireland, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that the Allies dominate the sea north of the Bismarck Archipelago.

One of the merchantmen was loaded with troops and 73 survivors of the estimated 400 Japanese soldiers aboard were rescued. Two of them died later and another killed himself.

Capt. Arleigh T. (30-Knot) Burke of Chevy Chase, Md., commanded the destroyers from Adm. William F. Halsey's force which in addition to sinking the three ships, shelled the Kavieng enemy base on New Ireland and bombed Japanese installations on Duke of York Island, between New Ireland and New Britain, all in 18 hours Tuesday.

More air raids on Rabaul, New Britain, Monday and Tuesday, with 164 tons of bombs dropped on air-dromes and shipping in Keravala Bay, continued the neutralization of the enemy's air bases which MacArthur said had helped in "lightening of the blockade" of Japan's Bismarck strong points.

Attack on Destroyer.
Burke, who also commanded the destroyers in the first sea attack on Kavieng last Friday, spotted the 350-ton cargo-transport early Tuesday morning and his destroyers sank it after a few minutes' shelling.

Turning south, he sighted the enemy destroyer, an old one. In its mad race for safety, under the pounding of American guns, it sank on a reef. Another cargo ship and nine barges accompanying it were sunk in a later attack. Duke of York Island was pounded after the destroyers.

Part of Burke's force, commanded by Comdr. R. W. Cavanagh, bombed Kavieng at dusk, laying down a smokescreen to confuse the aim of enemy six-inch batteries ashore. The destroyers started fires in the air-drome and dock areas.

Burke's ship victims brought to at least 30 the number of enemy merchant vessels and escort craft sunk off New Ireland and north of Rabaul since Feb. 14.

No Jap Air Opposition.
The attack on Rabaul was by bombers of all types from Solomon Island bases, and like recent previous assaults, no enemy interception. Only five Japanese fighters came up, but they stayed out of the raiders' range. It was the third successive day that the enemy at Rabaul had made no attempt to intercept.

The attackers blasted Lakunai and Keravat air-dromes in Rabaul's system of airfields, and scored direct hits on eight ships and numerous barges in Keravala Bay, leaving two vessels ablaze.

United States troops have pushed beyond the Mot River on the northeastern New Guinea coast and are about 12 miles northwest of Saidor, where the Americans toward Madang, Japanese coastal base about 45 miles farther northwest.

moning and Laufen, both on the old Austro-German frontier. Fifty more were added after hasty negotiations, from Camp Royal, Lieur, near Compigne.

NO SIGN OF SUDDEN GERMAN COLLAPSE
By TAYLOR HENRY
IRUN, Spain, Feb. 25 (AP).—American diplomats, newspapermen and relief workers left Germany after 13 months of internment with this generally-expressed opinion:

Germany can be defeated on the actual field of battle although morale in that country actually has been strengthened during the last six months.

This conclusion is based on observations of the behavior of the Germans with whom members of the interned group have been in contact at Baden Baden, the careful reading of the German press on the spot and other means of Nazi propaganda.

One of the most striking points to an observer inside Germany is the fact that the defeat of the Nazis must come through the defeat of their armed forces.

There is almost no sign visible to a careful observer that an internal collapse is worthy of consideration as far as the people as a whole are concerned.

Equally striking is the decrease in German fighting strength which became apparent as their morale increased.

This decrease was based mainly on losses of man power due to the heavy offensive on the Russian front in the summer and winter of 1943 and the inability of German war production to compete with that of the United Nations.

350 More U. S. Civilians to Join Repatriates.
IRUN, Spain, Feb. 25 (AP).—German occupation authorities at Biarritz, France, have made arrangements for some 350 American civilians interned as enemy aliens in German-occupied territories to join the American diplomatic party at Lisbon which is being exchanged for German nationals. The civilians are scheduled to cross the Spanish frontier Feb. 28.

Announcement of the new repatriation was made at the last minute and apparently was intended as a precedent to initiate exchange with the United States of this new category. The civilian internees will include almost all United States citizens in the German internment camps of Titt-

FINNS REPORTED CONSIDERING SIX SOVIET DEMANDS

Helsinki Reaction Mixed, Especially to Proposed Internment of Nazis, Stockholm Hears.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 25 (AP).—Reported Russian terms for an armistice with Finland, especially those regarding the disposition of German troops garrisoned in Northern Finland, are understood here to have met with a mixed reception in Finnish circles.

The London correspondent of Dagens Nyheter listed today six Soviet armistice demands as reported by unofficial but well-informed non-British sources who he said were very optimistic about Finland's chances of quitting the war.

List of Reported Demands.
According to the dispatch, the Moscow demands included:

1. The 1940 winter peace border.

2. German troops in Northern Finland must be interned for the duration.

3. If Finland desires, the Red Army will march into the country to assist in putting the Germans under control, but Finland's decision on this point will be voluntary.

4. If Finland and Russia agree on the Red Army marching in, Russia will guarantee to retire after the military operation, against the Germans is completed.

5. Moscow makes no demands for changes in the Finnish Government.

6. Demobilization of the Finnish Army and war damages are to be settled by later negotiations.

Finns Report Optimistic Demands.
Against this optimistic approach was the statement of a trustworthy Finn just arrived in Sweden who said that Finland was profoundly disturbed by what is understood to be one of the Russian demands—that the Finnish Army team up with the Russians in a drive to exterminate the seven German divisions now in Finland.

Reported Russian insistence on this condition, plus a demand that Soviet troops garrison the principal Finnish cities for the duration, neither of which were included in the version reported from London, is vigorously opposed by the Finns, and constitutes, the informant asserted, the biggest obstacle to eventual peace.

A Finnish home radio broadcast quoted Vaino Tanner, Finnish Minister of Finance, as telling the correspondent of Stockholm's Tidningen that "if terms (with Russia) are acceptable, we shall accept them immediately. If peace terms are impossible, we shall fight on with clenched teeth and await what the future holds in store."

Two Nazis Without a Shot.
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, Feb. 25 (AP).—Thunderbolt Pilot Second Lt. John A. Forrest, of Clio, Mich., claimed the destruction of two Messerschmitts in yesterday's raid on Stary, without firing a shot. With eight Me-109s coming at his crippled plane he turned into their path, causing two of them to collide. The others fled and he limped back to his base.

NOLTE AROUSED BY 'OUTSIDERS' AT AIRPORT SESSION

'We Shouldn't Let County People Tell Us Where to Place Field,' He Tells Aldermen.

SPEAKERS OPPOSE COLUMBIA BOTTOMS

Head of Metropolitan Committee Says 'Poorest' Site Was 'Railroaded Through.'

The special meeting of the Airport Committee of the Board of Aldermen to discuss the St. Louis Metropolitan Airport Committee and others on the Columbia Bottoms site this afternoon turned out to be a tumultuous session as Comptroller Louis Nolte became aroused by the number of speakers who were neither residents nor taxpayers of the city.

"This discussion should be confined to residents of the city—the people who pay the freight," he shouted in the course of an exchange of words with Dr. Travis Kallenbach of Clayton, chairman of the St. Louis Metropolitan Airport Committee. "We shouldn't allow county people to tell us where to place this field."

Nolte appeared at the meeting with a list of potential speakers, their addresses, and, apparently, their tax records.

"This man," he said, indicating Dr. Kallenbach, "hasn't even paid his last year's taxes."

"The matter is an area, not simply a city matter," Dr. Kallenbach exclaimed. "Aid, incidentally, my taxes are paid."

"I challenge that statement," Nolte cried. "At least they weren't paid up to yesterday."

Kallenbach, whose committee is known to oppose the Columbia Bottoms site, said he wanted to say that in the past St. Louis had lost much air commerce because of inadequate airport facilities. The Columbia Bottoms site is being "railroaded through," he said, adding that St. Louis would need a number of major airports, but Columbia is the poorest site and we shouldn't take the poorest first.

Kallenbach introduced Murray Whitehead, vice president of Eastern-Kauffman Aircraft Corporation, who stated, before Nolte could inquire, that he lived at Kimmiswick in Jefferson County.

Whitehead said he believed the ultimate site should be one available to plan for more than a year than Columbia Bottoms. A study of wind directions, he said, had convinced him that smoke from the city frequently is blown over Columbia Bottoms "where it mixes with the fog."

Whitehead said his firm would not care to locate on ground likely to settle. Director of Public Utilities Milton M. Kinsey, chairman of the Municipal Airport Commission, remarked in a loud aside: "We won't allow any more factories on any of our airports."

Commissioners in County.

Alderman J. Ray Weinbrener then asked Nolte how many members of the Airport Commission live in the county. Nolte shrugged and said he didn't know. Weinbrener said: "Chapin S. Newhard and Oliver Parks live outside the city limits—are you in favor of them talking?"

Nolte replied: "They're not here. Anyway, this is a problem for taxpayers of St. Louis. And there are members of your committee who haven't paid their taxes."

Someone in the back of the room called: "Where do you live?"

"I live at 1129 Penrose street, where I was born," Nolte said. "And my taxes are paid."

Another bill, introduced by Alderman Orville Armstrong, would appropriate $225,000 from the 1926 bond issue funds for use in deepening, widening and straightening sections of the River des Peres channel.

The board referred to its legislative committee a bill that would appropriate $6000 to the Personnel Department, above its annual budget for the fiscal year, to pay costs of remodeling the department's quarters. The bill was sent to the Board of Aldermen without recommendation from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

BILL OFFERED FOR STOP SIGNS AT 87 GRADE CROSSINGS

A bill to establish stop signs at 87 grade crossings within the city was introduced in the Board of Aldermen by Alderman Charles Albemarle. The measure, which was introduced at the request of Arthur C. Meyers, Director of Streets and Sewers.

Another bill, introduced by Alderman Orville Armstrong, would appropriate $225,000 from the 1926 bond issue funds for use in deepening, widening and straightening sections of the River des Peres channel.

After $130,000 Fire on Chippewa

The building of the Basic Chemical Corporation in the 4200 block of Ridgewood avenue shown after flames from the adjoining building of the Purex Corporation, 4600 Chippewa street, had swept through it.

MAGNESIUM PLANT PROPOSED FOR CITY

Plea Permit Be Granted Without Public Hearing Rejected by Board.

Plans to construct a $250,000 magnesium casting plant at 3314 Morganford road which would employ about 500 persons were disclosed today when backers of the project sought unsuccessfully to obtain a permit from the Board of Public Service without a public hearing to determine the desirability of establishing such an industry in a partly residential area.

The hasty petitioners, who explained their purpose at a special meeting from which reporters were barred, included representatives of Defense Plant Corporation, a Government agency which would build the proposed large one-story brick building; representatives of the National Magnesium Casting Co., 8025 South Broadway, which would operate the plant, and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who viewed the project as a means of curbing to some extent the trend toward unemployment.

The insistence of the group that the public hearing custom be waived roused members of the board to anger. The project itself appealed to them as a possibly desirable addition to the city's war industries.

Delay might cause the Government to establish the plant in another city, Huxley Gilliam, an agent for Defense Plant Corporation, warned the board. Besides, he said, he could present witnesses who could show that modern magnesium plant is installed in the plant would eliminate any noxious fumes.

The hearing will be at 10 a. m. next Friday.

VETERAN WHO TOLD RALLIES OF FEATS HELD AS IMPOSTOR

Thomas Howard Perry, 3680 South Broadway, who impressed several audiences of business men and industrial workers at recent war bond rallies with his "eyewitness" accounts of the war in China, was held by the Federal Bureau of Investigation today on four charges of impersonating a noncommissioned officer of the Army. He is liable to six months imprisonment on each count.

Gerald B. Norris, agent in charge of the F. B. I. office here, said Perry wore the uniform of a master sergeant on his speaking appearances and displayed campaign ribbons and a Purple Heart Medal, which he said testified to 16 battle wounds. Perry, 46 years old, and a former war plant worker, served in the Army from 1923 to 1927 when he received a medical discharge; he experienced no combat action during his enlistment. He has signed a statement, and will be arraigned tomorrow.

4 TESTING NAVY PLANE KILLED; BILLY SUNDAY'S SON A VICTIM

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25 (AP).—Paul T. Sunday, son of the late evangelist, William A. (Billy) Sunday, was one of four men killed when a Navy patrol bomber crashed against a mountain side in low clouds and snow flurries near Palmdale yesterday, the Los Angeles Times says. Sunday, 36 years old, was a test pilot.

The Eleventh Naval District identified the other victims as George G. Dorey, 30, pilot; Donald L. Jackson, 30, crew chief; James P. Seagrane, 30, radioman.

Wreckage of the bomber, which left Lockheed air terminal yesterday on a test flight, was sighted by a Lockheed test pilot, Eddy Martin. Bodies of the victims, who were employees of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation at Burbank, were taken on horseback by a Sheriff's posse to San Fernando.

Those who give to the Red Cross in the approaching War Fund drive would have a hard time to duplicate the sacrifices and services performed daily by the women Red Cross workers in the Mediterranean area, Talbert D. Jessup told the St. Louis County Bankers' Association at a meeting at a meeting at Belvedere Joe's, North and South boulevard and Eager road, last night.

Jessup, who was attached as field director to the Twelfth Army Air Force in England and in the African invasion, spoke in praise of the work performed by the Red Cross hospital workers in battle zones.

J. Russell Coulter, chairman of the Red Cross War Fund campaign which opens March 1, announced yesterday that Red Cross Sunday will be observed in most of St. Louis churches this Sunday, following similar observances of Red Cross Sabbath in synagogues and temples today and tomorrow.

CIO PROTESTING IN CAPITAL OVER MUNITION LAYOFF

Spokesman Gets Pledge From Clark and Cochran to Ask Officials to Reconsider.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Representatives of the Congress of Industrial Organizations are in the Capital to protest to Government officials against the scheduled layoff of employees at the small-arms ammunition plant in St. Louis and contemplated layoffs in other war plants.

Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, has already conferred with Senator Bennett C. Clark and Representative John J. Cochran of Missouri and has secured their pledge to importune Government agencies to reconsider their layoff plans. Early next week the CIO agents will discuss the matter with Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board, Paul McNutt of the War Relocation Commission, and Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson.

In letters to Clark, Cochran and Senator Harry S. Truman, Nixon said plans call for the layoff of 50,000 workers in the small-arms ammunition industry, including 14,000 at the St. Louis plant, 2800 at Western Cartridge Co. at East Alton, Ill., 5500 at the Twin City Ordnance Plant, Minneapolis, Minn., 8000 at Evansville, Ind., 4000 at Des Moines, Ia., 5500 at Denver and 1500 at Bridgeport, Conn. Most of the layoffs will come March 1, with completion by April 1, Nixon said.

The CIO argument is that curtailments, if necessary, should be made in the Eastern war plants, where man power is short, instead of the Midwestern plants, where plenty of labor is available.

Nixon's letter said, in part: "The War Department and the War Production Board, in selecting the plants to be cut back, are violating all considerations of national man power allocation, are closing down the most efficient and maintaining in operation the least efficient small-arms ammunition plants, and are closing the plants favorably located from the standpoint of military security."

"The cutbacks are applied with virtually no advance notice to labor or management and without any apparent plans for the utilization of the released man power and the vast industrial facilities for which the Government has just recently expended many millions of dollars."

3000 IN FIVE CLAY PLANTS GO ON STRIKE

Ignore Request by Union Heads to Return to Jobs—Pay Rise Sought.

Members of the AFL United Brick and Clay Workers of America, voted this afternoon to remain on strike at five clay products plants here despite recommendations by union officers to return to work while the National War Labor Board considers their request for a 13-cent hourly wage increase.

More than 3000 men went out on strike this morning when the regional WLB refused to approve the increase.

The companies affected by the strike are two plants of the Laclede-Christy Clay Products Co., 6900 Manchester avenue, and 4705 Ridgewood avenue; General Refractories Co., 1902 Brentwood boulevard; Evans-Howard Sewer Pipe Co., 5200 Manchester avenue, and Blackmer & Post Pipe Co., 2801 Hereford street. All are engaged in the manufacture of war material.

Machine maintenance men who are members of the International Association of Machinists, District 9, did not participate in the strike but reported for work at the Laclede-Christy and General Refractories plants today, a spokesman for the union informed the Post-Dispatch. The WLB approved profit-shift bonuses for the machinists.

George A. Ott, an officer of the union, said the men were not only striking against the WLB decision, but also against the companies which had fought any pay rise.

W. F. Godejohn, vice-president of the Laclede-Christy Co., said the company makes fire brick under war contracts for steel mills, synthetic rubber plants, power plants, and warships. He said a telegram from the WLB last night notified him that the men's wage increase request had been denied, but that one week vacations were ordered for work on a year's employment and two-week vacations after 10 years of employment.

REFUSES TO YIELD CHILD ARKANSAS MOTHER CLAIMS

Mrs. Mozell Lambrich of Pochontas, Ark., went to the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Anna Lambrich, at 2725 Henrietta street late today for the third time in an effort to regain the custody of her 2-year-old son, who has been in his grandmother's care since last November.

The 20-year-old mother sought advice on the custody of her child from Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper Vettori and was told that only she had a right to have him. With this information, she went to the grandmother's home with two detectives.

She told Vettori that the baby was brought to St. Louis from Pochontas by her husband, who is in the Army overseas and from whom she had been separated for several months. The mother came here with the child, but when she was forced to return to her home in Pochontas, she left the child here. Yesterday she was refused admittance to her mother-in-law's home, she said, and this morning when she went there with two policemen, Mrs. Anna Lambrich refused to give up the child.

JAIL GUARD FIRED FOR NEGLIGENCE IN ESCAPE OF 5

Warden Says Joseph Knop Failed to Inspect Cell Blocks Between 3 P. M. and 8:25 P. M.

Dismissal of Joseph Knop, elderly guard, for negligence that contributed to the escape of five prisoners from City Jail last Sunday night was announced today by Warden E. E. Hensley.

Hensley said the 63-year-old guard had admitted he made no inspection of the two fourth-floor cell blocks from 3 p. m. when he came on duty, until the alarm was sounded at 8:25 p. m. He said the floor guard was expected to patrol the catwalk surrounding the cell blocks at least once every hour.

Had Knop even peered through the peephole into the west block catwalk, Hensley said, he would have seen the prisoners saving the bars on the window through which they escaped. The Warden also censured Knop for permitting himself to be lured into the bullpen, where he was overpowered by James Jenkins and Paul Grandinetti, two of the four prisoners who have been recaptured.

"Knop failed to do that of which he was capable despite his age and physical condition," Hensley said. Knop, who suffers from heart disease, became ill following his tussle with the prisoners. Another guard, Isaac Duncan, assigned to the first floor, resigned Tuesday because he felt he was being held partly responsible for the break. Hensley said Duncan would have been asked to resign had he not done so.

Following the statements yesterday by two women that they had smuggled shoes containing hacksaw blades on four occasions to Jenkins and Stanley Spodulski, James Bunting, a prisoner who did not participate in the break, told Hensley he received a pair of shoes in which a hacksaw blade was secreted. He said Grandinetti asked him several days before the escape to accept a bundle and clothing and shoes that were to be delivered to his (Bunting's) cell. Grandinetti took the shoes, he said, removed a hacksaw blade from the inner sole and returned the shoes to him, adding, "Now keep your mouth shut."

Only one of the escaped prisoners, John Whorton, a Negro, is still a fugitive.

and the vast industrial facilities for which the Government has just recently expended many millions of dollars."

WOMAN IS KILLED IN SCUFFLE WITH FORMER HUSBAND

East Side Man Says Pistol Discharged After He Had Wrestled It From Her—Mother of 6.

Mrs. La Verne Leslie, mother of six children, died early today at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, of a gunshot wound of the abdomen suffered during a scuffle with her recently-divorced husband at her home in Washington Park last night.

The former husband, Claude Leslie, a crane operator for the American Zinc Co. of Illinois, Fairmont City, told police he went to his former wife's home, 5206 Eastgate avenue, Washington Park, last night to give her some money for support of the children. They became involved in an argument when she asked for a further account of his money, Leslie said, and she threatened him with an automatic pistol.

He wrested the weapon from her and thought he had removed all the bullets, he said. A shot was fired in the ensuing scuffle to regain the pistol, and Mrs. Leslie was struck in the right side of the abdomen, he told police. Their 16-year-old daughter, Doris, who witnessed the shootings, corroborated her father's statement.

Leslie called an ambulance and accompanied his former wife to the hospital, where he was later joined by three of their children. The other children range in age from 5 years to a 20-year-old son in the Navy.

They were assembled in a waiting room while the mother was being treated in the emergency room when George Schneider, a truck driver living at 803 Exchange avenue, East St. Louis, a friend of the mother, arrived and began to berate Leslie. Police intervened and booked Schneider on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon when they found a revolver in his pocket. It was not loaded. Schneider was released on bond.

Leslie, 41 years old, was released on $1000 bond, but was ordered rearrested after the death of Mrs. Leslie. She was 36.

BABY GIRAFFE DIES AT ZOO OF LUNG INFECTION

Mother's Refusal to Nurse It Blamed—Artificial Food Formula Inadequate.

The female giraffe, born a week ago at the Zoo in Forest Park, died at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon of what Dr. L. S. N. Walsh, Zoo veterinarian, diagnosed as an infection of the lungs, possibly bronchial pneumonia.

Dr. Walsh said the animal's illness was probably caused by its mother's refusal to nurse it, necessitating feeding from a bottle. He explained that the giraffe could not get from an artificial formula the colostrum which is contained in mother's milk and tends to contract internal infections.

George P. Vierheller, director of the Zoo, reported that the six-foot-tall baby showed no signs of illness last midnight but refused to eat at its regular 4 a. m. feeding time today. It collapsed a short while later and failed to respond to treatment.

This was the second giraffe ever born at the Zoo. The first one, born two years ago of the same parents, Bullie and Ida, died within 24 hours of birth.

Security Award to St. Louis Firm.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—The National Security Award of the Office of Civilian Defense has been given the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. at St. Louis and Lambert-St. Louis Field, it was announced today. Twenty-six other plants were similarly cited for "outstanding protection against air raids, fires, sabotage, explosion and other hazards."

JAIL GUARD FIRED FOR NEGLIGENCE IN ESCAPE OF 5

Warden Says Joseph Knop Failed to Inspect Cell Blocks Between 3 P. M. and 8:25 P. M.

Dismissal of Joseph Knop, elderly guard, for negligence that contributed to the escape of five prisoners from City Jail last Sunday night was announced today by Warden E. E. Hensley.

Hensley said the 63-year-old guard had admitted he made no inspection of the two fourth-floor cell blocks from 3 p. m. when he came on duty, until the alarm was sounded at 8:25 p. m. He said the floor guard was expected to patrol the catwalk surrounding the cell blocks at least once every hour.

Had Knop even peered through the peephole into the west block catwalk, Hensley said, he would have seen the prisoners saving the bars on the window through which they escaped. The Warden also censured Knop for permitting himself to be lured into the bullpen, where he was overpowered by James Jenkins and Paul Grandinetti, two of the four prisoners who have been recaptured.

"Knop failed to do that of which he was capable despite his age and physical condition," Hensley said. Knop, who suffers from heart disease, became ill following his tussle with the prisoners. Another guard, Isaac Duncan, assigned to the first floor, resigned Tuesday because he felt he was being held partly responsible for the break. Hensley said Duncan would have been asked to resign had he not done so.

Following the statements yesterday by two women that they had smuggled shoes containing hacksaw blades on four occasions to Jenkins and Stanley Spodulski, James Bunting, a prisoner who did not participate in the break, told Hensley he received a pair of shoes in which a hacksaw blade was secreted. He said Grandinetti asked him several days before the escape to accept a bundle and clothing and shoes that were to be delivered to his (Bunting's) cell. Grandinetti took the shoes, he said, removed a hacksaw blade from the inner sole and returned the shoes to him, adding, "Now keep your mouth shut."

Only one of the escaped prisoners, John Whorton, a Negro, is still a fugitive.

3000 IN FIVE CLAY PLANTS GO ON STRIKE

Ignore Request by Union Heads to Return to Jobs—Pay Rise Sought.

Members of the AFL United Brick and Clay Workers of America, voted this afternoon to remain on strike at five clay products plants here despite recommendations by union officers to return to work while the National War Labor Board considers their request for a 13-cent hourly wage increase.

More than 3000 men went out on strike this morning when the regional WLB refused to approve the increase.

The companies affected by the strike are two plants of the Laclede-Christy Clay Products Co., 6900 Manchester avenue, and 4705 Ridgewood avenue; General Refractories Co., 1902 Brentwood boulevard; Evans-Howard Sewer Pipe Co., 5200 Manchester avenue, and Blackmer & Post Pipe Co., 2801 Hereford street. All are engaged in the manufacture of war material.

Machine maintenance men who are members of the International Association of Machinists, District 9, did not participate in the strike but reported for work at the Laclede-Christy and General Refractories plants today, a spokesman for the union informed the Post-Dispatch. The WLB approved profit-shift bonuses for the machinists.

George A. Ott, an officer of the union, said the men were not only striking against the WLB decision, but also against the companies which had fought any pay rise.

W. F. Godejohn, vice-president of the Laclede-Christy Co., said the company makes fire brick under war contracts for steel mills, synthetic rubber plants, power plants, and warships. He said a telegram from the WLB last night notified him that the men's wage increase request had been denied, but that one week vacations were ordered for work on a year's employment and two-week vacations after 10 years of employment.

REFUSES TO YIELD CHILD ARKANSAS MOTHER CLAIMS

Mrs. Mozell Lambrich of Pochontas, Ark., went to the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Anna Lambrich, at 2725 Henrietta street late today for the third time in an effort to regain the custody of her 2-year-old son, who has been in his grandmother's care since last November.

The 20-year-old mother sought advice on the custody of her child from Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper Vettori and was told that only she had a right to have him. With this information, she went to the grandmother's home with two detectives.

She told Vettori that the baby was brought to St. Louis from Pochontas by her husband, who is in the Army overseas and from whom she had been separated for several months. The mother came here with the child, but when she was forced to return to her home in Pochontas, she left the child here. Yesterday she was refused admittance to her mother-in-law's home, she said, and this morning when she went there with two policemen, Mrs. Anna Lambrich refused to give up the child.

"Are Blenders People?"

We were extolling the virtues of a friend recently, a famous blender of fine whiskies. We spoke of his extraordinarily acute sense of taste and smell, and how difficult it was to fool him in a test. Perhaps we got off a little bit on the enthusiastic side, because our man in our party asked, "Are Blenders People?" Well, there could be but one answer to that. Yes, blenders are people—but they are unusual people.

Nature has endowed us all with certain senses: feeling, hearing, seeing, smelling and tasting. And we are all pretty good at all of these senses, but once in a blue moon nature endows a man with unusual talents of taste and smell. If he is smart he recognizes these extraordinary talents and becomes a blender, either in the food field, or in the beverage field.

Take that cup of coffee you had for breakfast this morning which made you say, "My, this is a swell cup of coffee." You probably didn't take the trouble to think that your enjoyment was the result of the painstaking and skillful efforts of an expert coffee blender.

Take a blended whiskey for instance. The expert blender with that highly developed sense of smell and taste gets busy. Of course, first of all, he must have a considerable "library" of various types of whiskey, each possessing certain dominant characteristics such as flavor, color, body, aroma, tartness, mellowness, etc., etc. With these stocks he can work out any number of combinations.

To make a palatable blend his "ingredients" must be compatible, must get along together. You know, there is such a thing as incompatibility of temperament in whiskey, too.

And proper sequence is of the utmost importance. Take three whiskeys, #1, #2, and #3, and blend them together in that order, and you might get a very unsatisfactory end-product. But if you blended #1 and #3, and then added #2 you might end up with a product which would make you say, "My, this is a fine drink of whiskey." So, you see, there is skill and science and unusual talent required in the blending of whiskeys. To be sure, expert blenders are rare. And blending is a lucrative profession which you cannot prepare for in college.

Think of this, won't you, the next time you smack your lips over your drink of fine blended whiskey.

Yes, blenders are people—unusual people. And they get a great deal of pleasure out of their contribution to gracious living.

100 AXIS AGENTS REPORTED SEIZED IN CHILE ROUNDUP

Drive Said to Prove German Embassy in Argentina Is Spy Center for Latin America.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—Information has been received here that police in Chile have arrested about 100 Axis agents in the last few days.

An official source said yesterday that a drive to smash a spy ring in Chile had developed that the German embassy in Argentina was the center for Axis espionage in Latin America.

Guillermo Kunsemuller was arrested by Chilean police Feb. 15, it was learned, and admitted operating a clandestine radio for the German spy ring.

These other developments were disclosed by the same source, who declined the use of his name.

The Argentine and Chilean espionage organizations gathered and sent to Germany valuable information about fortifications, installations, troop movements, ship movements, production figures and materiel descriptions.

Although direct communication with Germany was broken off by Argentina when it severed diplomatic relations, it appears that crews of neutral ships and clandestine radios kept the information going to Berlin.

Gen. Friedrich Wolf, the German military attaché in Buenos Aires, distributed instructions from the German high command to agents scattered throughout South America. Gen. Wolf, who was put under House arrest when diplomatic relations were broken, later was released pending his repatriation to Germany.

Another agent in the plot to obtain Allied military secrets was Friedrich von Schultze Hausman, former general manager of the Nord Deutscher Lloyd steamship line. He escaped to Argentina when the Chileans first pressed their investigations of Axis spies, and is now under arrest there.

After seizing Kunsemuller, the Chilean police arrested other spies—Augusto Kroll, Bernardo Timmerman and Hans Graner—who gave further information implicating a number of agents operating in and out of Buenos Aires.

The official source said that the Chilean Government has given every indication that drastic and speedy action will be taken against the enemy agents found there.

Santiago Agrees Important Arrests Have Been Made.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 25 (AP).—An authorized source in the government said last night that the figure of 100 spies reported in Washington to have been arrested in Chile was "pretty high," but agreed on the significance and importance of the arrests.

It was announced recently that 14 persons had been detained and that perhaps half a dozen others were under surveillance.

Union Elects East St. Louisan.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 25 (AP)—Eddie R. Stahl of East St. Louis, Ill., was elected president of the International Council of the AFL Aluminum Workers' International Union at the closing session of its three-day convention here yesterday. He was formerly secretary-treasurer of the international council. William L. Cowley of East St. Louis was one of six vice-presidents elected.

Senate Galleries Crowded.

Its galleries were overflowing with curious spectators as the Senate voted.

The vote was announced by Vice-President Wallace. At that instant the bill became law.

Barkley stuck by his announced intention to vote to override Roosevelt.

Spectators jostled for seats when the Senate galleries were opened. The visitors—most of them women—packed every seat in the gallery and stood two-deep against the back wall long before Wallace called the session to order.

Barkley arrived 11 minutes after the session opened. The gallery crowds elbowed for vantage points and leaned forward to watch him take his seat at the front of the chamber. They became silent as the reading clerk began droning through the veto message. This was the Senate's first formal notice that the President had turned down the tax bill.

As the reading clerk finished there were cries of "Vote," "Vote." Wallace recognized Senator Pepper (Dem.), Florida.

Pepper proclaimed his unwavering devotion to "liberalism" and Roosevelt.

With full knowledge, he said, that he stood with a small minority against over-riding the veto, Pepper declared: "I have nothing to gain except the inestimable satisfaction of expressing my own conviction."

If the issue simply were over-riding the veto of a tax bill passed by Congress, Pepper asserted, he would not be so moved. He was afraid, he said, that the defeat of the President on the tax bill might alter the permanent course and character of our party.

Lucas Explains His Stand.

Taking the floor after Pepper finished, Senator Lucas (Dem.), Illinois, who usually supports administration policy, said he disagreed with the Florida Senator on the issue involved in the over-riding vote.

"I'm voting on the issue of tax legislation, and tax legislation alone," Lucas said.

Senator Langer of North Dakota, the only Republican voting to sustain the veto, declared from the floor that "the President was right in saying this is a bill not for the relief of the needy, but for the relief of the greedy."

"I applaud his courage," Langer said of the President. "When the people understand the operations of this legislation they will rise up and support the President."

"Every war profiteer will gain and the people will lose through this bill. And I assert that more millions have been and are being created by this war than were created in World War I."

Langer said that he personally "owed the President nothing" and that the chief executive had, in fact, "gone out of his way to defeat me for the Senate."

"But I am with him in this fight," Langer continued. "The Senate has not done its duty in the matter of tax legislation."

Clark's Views at Caucus.

Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, is understood to have told the party caucus yesterday that in his opinion the President's telegram asking Barkley to stay as majority leader opened the way "to much greater unanimity among Senate Democrats and a much better relationship between the President and Congress."

Clark proposed acceptance of Barkley's resignation, but made it clear he did so for the sole purpose of having him re-elected unanimously.

That, he is reported to have told his colleagues, "wipes the slate clean."

"By electing him as the new leader, we are making him the undisputed choice of Senate Democrats in a decision in which there is no outside interference. This will give Senator Barkley much greater prestige and make him much more useful than ever before."

7000 Telegrams for Barkley.

In the first 24 hours after his break with Roosevelt, Barkley received some 7000 telegrams.

Five office assistants spent yesterday opening them. They didn't

F. D. R. IS FIRST PRESIDENT TO CARRY TAX FIGHT WITH CONGRESS TO VETO STAGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).

TURBULENT has been the word for this country's tax history from the days of the Boston Tea Party to the current congressional revolt against President Roosevelt's veto.

Since the creation of the Treasury in 1789, the United States has resorted to many devices to pay the ever-mounting costs of Federal Government, but Roosevelt is the first chief executive to carry White House disagreement with Congress over taxes to the point of a veto.

have time to open many of the hundreds of letters also coming in a growing flood.

Aids said virtually all the messages lauded Barkley's stand, but "a few" were critical.

"Discounting a Social Security tax freeze, Roosevelt calculated the new bill would bring the Treasury less than a billion dollars. He had asked for $10,500,000,000. The new excise rates will not take effect until April 1.

the political enemies of President Roosevelt. . . . We are assuming that Mr. Barkley simply lost his head, that the damage done is not irreparable and even that perhaps the Senator's explosion, untimely and out of place as we think it was, will benefit him in the end. . . . The time and place for it (the explosion) clearly were last Monday at the White House when Mr. Roosevelt read parts of his veto message to Mr. Barkley and other leaders. . . . Mr. Barkley says now he did not know Monday all of the language the President proposed to use but obviously he gave the President no hint of all the pent-up resentments released in his Senate speech Wednesday."

BARKLEY REPLY: 'FAITH IN YOU ENDURES IN ME'

this perilous period my heart has gone out to you in sympathetic understanding, not only of your great responsibility, but your high purpose in meeting that responsibility. I want you to know that that faith in you endures in me today and will continue to endure because I have recognized in you a spokesman of the people, whose chief desire was to advance their welfare and their happiness.

We have on some occasions disagreed as to policies and we have sometimes disagreed as to methods. Frequently I have submerged my own views in recognition of your more intimate knowledge and your greater responsibility. Sometimes you have yielded your views to mine. In all these circumstances we have maintained a mutual respect which I have deeply appreciated.

But it seems to me there is something broader and more fundamental than any personal acquiescence as between you and me over matters of public policy and fundamental principles. In this great crisis of our nation's history we must all seek some common ground upon which we can meet and have confidence in one another. That applies to all the branches of our government. If we cannot trust one another in this tragic period of the history of our nation and the world, how can the people trust us?

I want you to know that you have my utmost confidence and affection and the personal and official relations which have been to me a source of infinite pride, I hope may be continued. In view of all that happened, I felt compelled to tender my resignation as majority leader at the Democratic conference today. The conference unanimously accepted it and then unanimously re-elected me as majority leader. In spite of my own personal preference to yield this responsibility to some other, in view of their earnest and unanimous action, and in view of your own generous and manly statement to me, I have accepted again the majority leadership of the Senate.

I fervently trust that this incident may be instrumental in bringing the executive and legislative departments closer together in fullest co-operation to the end that we may win this terrible war at the earliest possible moment, bring all of our armed forces back to their homes and loved ones, and be instrumental in bringing to a downhearted and distressed world peace at last. With great respect, I am, Cordially and Sincerely Yours, ALBEN W. BARKLEY.

Navy Man Tells 600 War Plant Heads Groundwork for Conversion Is Being Laid.

The need for speed in terminating war contracts and clearing the way for industry to convert to peacetime production when hostilities cease was stressed by contract termination authorities of Army and Navy at a regional conference held yesterday at Hotel Jefferson.

Some 600 contractors, subcontractors and suppliers of war materials from seven states attended the conference, which was sponsored by the War Contract Termination Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, and took part in a question-and-answer discussion.

"The essence of successful contract termination is speed," Comdr. J. H. Stewart, executive assistant of the Navy's cost inspection service, told the conference. "We can lose billions of dollars through delay in getting into peacetime production when the war is over."

Groundwork Being Laid. The War and Navy departments are now engaged in "exploratory work" in certain war plants aimed at developing methods for expediting the processing of termination claims of large contractors, he reported. Accountants and other termination specialists are being installed in these plants to familiarize themselves with accounting and property features. By satisfying themselves of the soundness of a contractor's method in computing his termination claims, the specialists well in advance of wholesale contract cancellation could arrange to reduce the Government's examination to a sampling and testing basis.

Comdr. Stewart pointed out that small and moderate-sized contractors would be the principal sufferers from delay, and would be forced into shutdowns and layoffs if termination funds were not forthcoming promptly. Consequently, he declared, every effort should be bent toward speedily negotiated settlements, subordinating accounting features as far as possible.

Not Mere Auditing Job. Contract termination should not be viewed as purely an auditing job to be left to auditors, it was emphasized by Col. D. N. Hausman, director of the readjustment division of the Army Service Forces. The fastest and fairest way to settle contracts is by negotiation between the contractor and the Government, he said, advocating meetings in which the contractor and the contracting officer sit down and, "by a proper give and take, in the regular American way of doing business," try to reach a just, final settlement.

"The Comptroller General of the United States believes that a detailed and minute audit of these thousands and thousands of contracts should be made before any settlement is undertaken," Col. Hausman continued. "All I can say is to quote what Mr. Baruch (Bernard Baruch, of the Joint Contract Termination Board) said and I do so: 'Any course such as recently proposed by the Comptroller General would quibble the nation into a panic. . . . It would mean unemployment by audit.' I think that takes care of the subject."

This statement evoked a burst of applause. Responsibility to Subcontractor. William A. Coolidge, head of the finance section of the Navy's Office of Procurement and Material, expressed the opinion the Government, because of administrative difficulties, will decide not to assume responsibility to the subcontractor for any payment for goods delivered to the prime contractor or to another subcontractor.

However, he added, the Government probably will recognize the moral responsibility to see that the subcontractor is paid for his work in process and for his commitments.

Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann and Arthur G. Drefs, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce, made brief welcoming talks to the conference. W. W. Schneider, chairman of the chamber's War Contract Termination Committee, presided.

FORGERY TO GET '44 AUTO STICKERS IS UNDER INQUIRY

City detectives are investigating complaints from the City Tax Collector's office that rubber stamps and employees' signatures have been forged by applicants for 1944 city automobile license stickers to avoid payment of their 1943 personal property taxes.

An ordinance passed last summer requires that applicants for licenses must present a receipt showing their taxes are paid, or show that they do not owe any. In cases where the tax receipt has been lost, or no taxes are owed, the applicant has his license application stamped at the Tax Collector's office with a rubber stamp countersigned by a clerk. Chief of Detectives Herman Siebels said it was these stamps and signatures that have been forged.

Rumors of forgeries had been current for a month. Collector Richard E. Gruner said, but an applicant who presented a stamped application and wanted the signature of an employee of the office placed on it to make it valid led to his asking police for assistance in checking on other applications suspected of being forged. Gruner said about 25,000 applications would be checked.

SCHOOLS GET $4500 IN FIRST WASTE PAPER CURB PICKUP

St. Louis elementary public, Catholic and Lutheran schools have received more than $4500 for their part in the Jan. 23 curb collection of waste paper, Irwin A. Olan, chairman of the St. Louis Waste Paper Committee, announced yesterday. St. Louis Boy Scouts also received $500.

The money, divided among the three groups of schools on the basis of enrollment, was in addition to weekly checks to the schools which are carrying on a continuous collection campaign. Charity organizations, using their own trucking facilities, also received substantial amounts, Olan said.

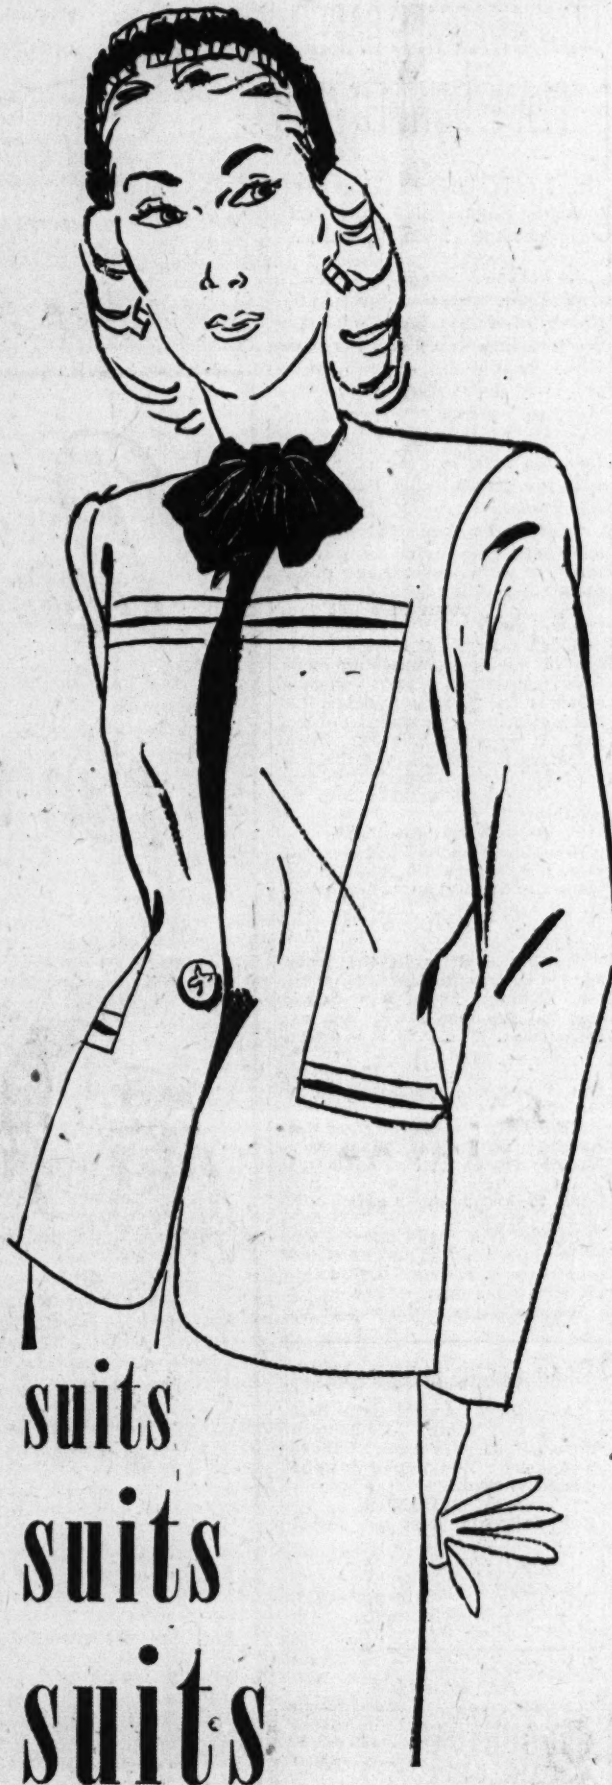

Another curb collection will take place in St. Louis and St. Louis County Sunday, March 5, and Olan urged the public to have its waste paper tied up in bundles to aid the student volunteers who again will co-operate in the pickup.

EX-CONVICT STEALS HENNING'S AUTO, WRECKS IT IN CHASE

Lloyd P. Butler, a former convict, was held by police on a large warrant today after he had stolen the automobile of Circuit Attorney Thomas Hennings Jr. and crashed it against a tree in a chase by a motorcycle patrolman, who had recognized the car as having been stolen.

Patrolman Louis Calcaterra said he saw the automobile traveling north in Broadway about 10 minutes after Hennings had reported it stolen from a parking lot at 3609 Washington boulevard. As Calcaterra started after the car, he said, the driver increased his speed. At times the chase reached 70 miles an hour, he asserted.

Calcaterra said Butler attempted to run him down by swerving the automobile toward the motorcycle. When Butler did this at Mallinckrodt and Ninth streets he apparently lost control and crashed against the tree. He was taken to City Hospital and treated for minor bruises. The car was wrecked. Butler told police he worked as a railroad section laborer and lived at Centralia, Ill. In 1940, he said, he was convicted of larceny of a motor vehicle and served a three-year prison sentence.

HOW UNARMED CARGO PLANE DOWNED ZERO

St. Louis Officer Home on Visit Says Pilot Tricked Japanese Into Crash.

An unarmed American Air Force cargo plane operating in the India-China area has been officially credited with downing a Japanese Zero. That is one of the oddities of war in the Eastern Hemisphere reported by Capt. Herbert Meredith, St. Louis flyer at home on furlough after a year of service with the United States Fourteenth Air Force.

"Twelve Zeros spotted eight of our C-47s, none of us with armament, as we were returning to our base," Meredith related yesterday. "They dived down and got four of our planes."

"Then a Zero got on the tail of one of our four remaining ships. The American pilot headed straight for a mountainside. At the last minute, he pulled out and made a getaway. The Jap, intent on riving his guns, found the controls of his plane too slow to save him. The Zero crashed into the mountain."

Ship Bears "Citation." Newcomers at the base, Meredith said, always eye the victory emblem, the tiny Japanese flag painted on the nose of the C-47, with suspicion. They think that it is a gag.

For his exploits in the troop-carrier command, Meredith wears the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with one oak leaf cluster. The D. F. C. is awarded for 50 round trips over the hazardous Himalaya Mountains. The bashful, 24-year-old captain has made 114.

He also has enough flying time spent in air-dropping supplies to Chinese troops in Burma and to Allied soldiers in advanced positions to boost his credited total to 191 missions. The schedule, Meredith said, calls for flying seven days a week, and on Christmas there were more flights than on any other day.

"In newspaper parlance, the passage over the Himalayas is known as the 'hump,' the officer, formerly an accountant, observed. "In India we've dropped the term. The General thought it might be a mental hazard to new flyers."

After a visit with his wife, the former Miss Dorothy Berghold, 3508 Greer avenue, and his mother, Mrs. Lucy Meredith, 3650 Castleman avenue, Capt. Meredith will report to the Air Force relocation center in Miami to await another assignment.

The Post-Dispatch-radio station, KSD, will broadcast an interview with Capt. Meredith in March, as a part of the first program in a new series called "St. Louis Heroes."

west and south yesterday shot down 158 Nazi planes. Eighth Air Force bombers downed 83 Nazi planes during their attacks on Schweinfurt and fighter plane factories at Gotha, while their accompanying fighters accounted for 37 others in terrific air battles. Bombers of the Fifteenth Air Force attacking Steyr bagged 38 Nazi fighters.

The Britain-based American forces lost 49 bombers and 10 fighters; the Italy-based formations lost 16 Fortresses and three fighters with two other fighters missing. The R. A. F.'s losses were 85 planes in the night's operations which included attacks on targets in Northwest Germany and "extensive" mine-laying. The Air Ministry said more than 1000 sorties were flown against Germany during the night.

In Tuesday's two-way punch, the first of the series of simultaneous assaults from west and south, the combined American forces shot down 133 German fighters.

5TH ARMY REPELS TWO LIGHT NAZI THRUSTS AT ANZIO

It was said to have been brought from Northern Italy. The two beachhead attacks were launched by only a company of infantry in each case—usually about 200 men. They were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy, it was announced.

Allied artillery got the range of a German tank concentration near the so-called factory in the Carroceto area and forced it to disperse.

Although the Germans maintained close contact against the Allied beachhead, the passing of a fifth day without major developments gave the Fifth Army valuable time to strengthen its defenses against an expected third full-scale German offensive.

The Germans continued to make a number of nuisance infiltrations around Allied outposts south of the Nazis' main rallying point at Carroceto, but a Fifth Army spokesman said these were being kept under control.

Eighth Army Front. Patrols sent out by the British Eighth Army found German positions still firm. Allied mortar fire tore into a considerable German movement in the Arielli area.

Inland from the Adriatic coast. Mediterranean air forces flew 950 sorties yesterday in operations ranging from a second heavy bomber attack in two days on an aircraft parts factory at Steyr, Austria, to routine patrols over the beachhead where only four German planes were observed during the day.

Thirteen enemy aircraft were destroyed in a Spitfire raid on a Yugoslav landing field. American Twelfth Air Force Mitchell medium bombers attacked landing strips at Fabrica di Roma, 30 miles northwest of Rome.

German headquarters yesterday claimed the following successes in the last seven days in the beachhead area: The capture of 706 British prisoners, 642 American prisoners and 149 prisoners of so far undetermined nationality; the destruction of 86 tanks and the capture of four undamaged Sherman tanks.

ST. LOUIS NAVY MAN KILLED IN AIR CRASH OFF CALIFORNIA

William D. Kimes, aviation ordnance mate, was killed in an airplane accident Wednesday off the coast of California, the Navy Department informed his mother, Mrs. F. S. Kimes, 725 Aubert avenue, last night.

Kimes, 20 years old, was stationed at the Navy Auxiliary Air Station at Holtville, Cal. He attended Soldan High School and enlisted in the Navy in June, 1940. He has three brothers in the Navy, Seaman Kenneth, Storekeeper Carl and Aviation Cadet Jack Kimes.

TWO FREE-SPENDING 'OFFICERS' SEIZED AS ARMY FUGITIVES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—Two youngsters in resplendent officers' uniforms climaxed a lavish spending spree last night by throwing a dinner party attended by some prominent Washington residents.

It was really a sensational affair, especially when a squad of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents walked in and seized the two hosts as long-term military prisoners, lately escaped from Fort Knox, Ky. F. B. I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover said they had passed several thousand dollars worth of fraudulent checks since arriving here Feb. 5. He identified the prisoners as Douglas Ray Allred, 20 years old, former bank employee in Portland, Ore., who posed as Maj. Allen Ward, and Edward Richard Malone Jr., 18, former Brooklyn high school boy, who registered as Capt. J. E. Daley, when they rented a $30-a-day suite in one of Washington's leading hotels and began acquiring friends on the basis of free spending and entertaining. Hoover said they were serving sentences for repeated infractions of military laws when they escaped from Fort Knox.

Allred, Hoover said, estimated he had spent $1500 for military uniforms alone since arriving in the capital.

MORE CROSS-TOWN STREETS URGED ON PLAN COMMISSION

Russell Report Shows Need for North-South Links—Would Widen Present Arteries.

Recommendations that the City Plan Commission consider a program for establishing a large number of cross-town streets to link the north and south sections of St. Louis more closely together were made yesterday by Ernest J. Russell, architect, who assumed the chairmanship of the commission.

Outlining this program as the chief unfinished business of the commission under the old ordinance which provided for the commission's establishment, Russell pointed out that at present there were only two streets which effectively "tie together" these sections of the city. These, he said, were Broadway and Kingshighway.

"More recently some interest has been shown in widening and developing Third street," he added, "but many more north-south streets are needed."

Several Streets Suggested. He advocated that the commission make studies to determine the possibility of widening, straightening and make cross-town thoroughfares of Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets; of Jefferson, Grand, Vandeventer, Newstead and Holiamont avenues and of Union boulevard.

Russell said that the city had already developed a system of east-west traffic arteries which had "encouraged much of our population to move outside the limits of the city." He suggested that in building the north-south arteries the city "avoid the same mistake."

At the same time the Commission makes a study of these traffic thoroughfares, Russell said, it should also undertake a more complete study of the causes of blight in certain residential areas and a study of the control of nuisances which grow up in these areas. He pointed out that, until these nuisances and the blight they cause are controlled, the city may expect to continue to lose population to the newer county residential areas.

Zoning Proposal Studied. The proposed zoning ordinance for the city had been submitted for study to various civic organizations, Russell said, and numerous changes in minor details had been suggested. Upon his recommendation, the Commission put off consideration of these changes until the next regular meeting. It approved formally the report presented to it last month by its recreation committee. The report presented a construction program for recreational facilities for the next 15 years.

After its open meeting the commission went into an executive session to discuss the removal of Miss Clara T. Pendleton as assistant engineer. No action was taken, but the commission announced it would meet again in a closed session next Thursday afternoon to again consider the action.

Neither members of the commission nor Miss Pendleton, an employee of that body for 18 years, would comment on the matter. She presented a resignation several months ago, but withdrew it before any action was taken. Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann said his attention had been called to "personality clashes" among employees of the commission, but that he had refused to enter the controversy and had directed the commission to dispose of the matter itself.

announced yesterday by Premier Joseph Stalin, was one of more than 100 towns and villages taken by Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's army in a three-day drive that pierced German defenses on a 31-mile front and gained up to 15 miles. The Russians "completely liquidated the important German bridgehead on the left bank of the Dnieper east of Rogachev and Zhlobin," it was announced.

One formation of Rokossovsky's army was credited with killing 4000 enemy troops, capturing many prisoners and quantities of war material, including 62 big guns. Giving additional details on the capture of Dno, Moscow said the Russians routed 30,000 German troops in storming the last important base east of Pskov, Baltic gateway city. Dno is about 60 miles from Pskov.

The Soviet command announced

WHEN COLDS AND CONSTIPATION STRIKE TOGETHER—TAKE THIS FAST-ACTING LAXATIVE

When Colds are accompanied by headache and acute constipation, you feel miserable all over. When a laxative is needed, trust Pluto Water. Although PLUTO works swiftly, it works by gentle osmosis, creating fluid in the colon, flushing digestive waste, usually within an hour. Pluto is a concentrated, fortified and scientifically stabilized saline mineral water with all minerals and salts in complete solution. It passes through the stomach without disturbing its function, is not absorbed, and acts in the colon where physicians want a laxative to act. Try Pluto now! Caution—Use only as directed on label. You must get refreshing, comforting relief in one hour or your money back. In 2c and 5c economy bottles, also 10c size, French Lick Springs Hotel Co., French Lick, Indiana.

EDWARDSVILLE GIRL, 5, KILLED BY TRUCK ON HIGHWAY 66

Carol Ann Buhr, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Buhr, 663 Frederick street, Edwardsville, was killed late yesterday afternoon when she was struck by a truck on U. S. Highway 66 near the eastern boundary of Edwardsville.

Thomas Grote, 26, of Worth, Ill., driver of the truck for the DeCatur Cartage Co., said the child apparently watched another car pass then darted into the path of the truck.

HELEN GAHAGAN FOR CONGRESS

JUDGE MAKES MAN KISS HANDS, FEET OF WOMAN HE KICKED

Defendant Then Is Put Back in Jail Another Week to 'Think It Over.'

CHICAGO, Feb. 25 (AP).—A clerk who was in Felony Court on a charge of assault with intent to kill yesterday obeyed an order of Judge Joseph H. McGarry and knelt down and kissed the hands and feet of the woman he allegedly kicked.

The clerk, Thomas J. McLaughlin, admitted he had kicked Mrs. Edna Hanson after she had tried to escort him from a South Side drug store where she is employed. Mrs. Hanson testified she required treatment at a hospital and lost several days' work as a result of the kick.

McLaughlin, admitting he was guilty, told Judge McGarry he was intoxicated and "I didn't know what I was doing." McLaughlin was held in jail in lieu of $5000 bail, as Judge McGarry continued the case to March 3, stating: "I'll give you another week in jail to think over what you've done."

RAMIREZ FORCED OUT IN ARGENTINA BY ARMY CLIQUE

and only the announcements that Ramirez had not resigned, Velasco's statements and a few press reports filtered through. Velasco announced that the Undersecretariat of the Press would be abolished and that the press would be permitted to publish news freely "so long as it adhered to the truth."

Bloodless Coup. The coup appeared to have been bloodless, but dispatches from the Argentine capital said that new rumors continued to circulate about the city and that in some parts of the capital truckloads of troops took up positions.

Detachments from the main police headquarters, including mounted police, also were assigned to duty. The Buenos Aires newspaper La Nacion said that Cabinet members and a group of army officers gathered about 11 o'clock last night at Farrell's War Department offices and conferred until 1:20 before going to the President's palace, remaining there until about 2:50 a. m. A Buenos Aires dispatch said that Velasco told newspaper men soon after assuming his new post that he was going to see "the new President, Gen. Farrell," and that later Farrell arrived at Government House accompanied by his aides-de-camp.

Balls Ramirez Plan. Another report said that only yesterday Ramirez had planned to infuse new blood into his cabinet, including a new post for Gen. Gilbert.

He was reported to have repeatedly sought support of his plan to throw overboard the ultra-nationalistic group opposing him and even had promised some civilians that he would call for elections. Another dispatch said that Farrell and a group of officers had conferred with Ramirez again at his residence this morning, apparently to discuss the brief announcement and presumably to talk things over with Col. Peron, who is frequently called "the young power behind the throne."

The group was reported to have included Gen. von der Becke, chief of the Argentine army staff and brother of a member of the board of directors of the German chemical firm Schering.

The first Associated Press dispatch from Buenos Aires after a news blackout imposed by Argentine censors was limited to a War Department release of a statement signed by Ramirez and addressed to the Argentine people. It said:

"Exhausted by the intense tasks of government which make it necessary for me to take a rest, on this date I delete the office which I occupy to Vice-President Gen. Edelmiro Farrell."

Stand of Army Group. Farrell was reported to have resigned his post as war minister as a means of obtaining a free hand to push Ramirez out.

A former amateur boxing champion and a cavalry officer, Farrell has had little opportunity heretofore to demonstrate his abilities as a statesman.

It is believed here that the fact that he has been serving as vice-president might have influenced the army group opposing Ramirez to put him into the president's chair. It was recalled that on previous occasions, when there were rumors that Ramirez might resign there was some anxiety in Argentine circles that other American countries might balk at recognizing a new de facto government.

The army group might have been influenced in backing Farrell by the belief that he would be regarded as a logical successor to Ramirez and that the question of withdrawing recognition of the government would not arise in other capitals. According to private advices from Buenos Aires, Ramirez assembled a large group of army officers at Campo de Mayo garrison on the outskirts of the city and requested their view of his idea that his military government should gradually veer toward democratic normalization of the country through the appointment of civilians to cabinet posts. A majority of the officers were reported to have opposed the move.

OPA DESCRIBES BLACK MARKET IN GASOLINE

75 Million Gallons Sold Illegally in January, Agency Reports.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration, reporting illegal use of 75 million gallons of gasoline in January as a result of black market operations, gave a cross-section analysis today of how the fuel was drained from the rationed supply.

The agency's account tells, for example, of a dealer who sold gasoline at 42½ cents a gallon without collecting coupons and then purchased counterfeit stamps to replenish his supply. It includes also the case of a pawnshop operator who served as a distributor of black market coupons, as well as an instance where two peddlers of coupons got their stock by persuading a 15-year-old boy to steal coupons from his father.

Price Administrator Chester Bowles reported such operations, had served to keep monthly rations of low-mileage motorists about 25 per cent smaller than they should be.

Citing the case of the dealer who charged 42½ cents for his gasoline, OPA said that when questioned about sales without coupons "he admitted he had bought both stolen and counterfeit coupons in amounts varying from 300 to 400 gallons worth."

The agency said it was counting on its "all-out" enforcement drive "to stop this misappropriation of our critical gasoline supply and protect the share of the legitimate consumer against competitors who use any means to get more than their share."

How a Salaried Man Can Figure Out Just What He Owes.

This is the fifth of a series on income tax blank difficulties.

By JAMES MARLOW AND GEORGE ZIELKE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP).—The place to start filling out your long form Federal income tax blank is on page 3.

That's where you list your deductions.

To illustrate, line by line, the task remaining, we'll take for our example Mr. Aloysius Marblehead.

Let's say he notes contributions of $160 to church and charity; $180 for interest he paid on a loan; deductible taxes of $125.

He is married and has one child. These facts are recorded on page 3, too. He claims $1200 exemption as a married man; $350 credit for one dependent—son Mortimer.

Now he turns to page 1.

The Automatic Widgets Co. of Poor, Me., paid Aloysius $90 a week in 1943, so he enters the sum of $4680 in the first line in both columns—for both the income and Victory tax. And repeats the figures on the line opposite "total."

He has a couple of deductible expenses—$25 for dues to a professional society, $15 for professional publications—so he enters $40 in both columns. This leaves his compensation after deductible expenses as $4640 in both columns. This figure also is carried down to the "total income" line.

He now puts in his deductions (from page 3) opposite contributions, interest and taxes, and totals them—$465. Like other ordinary taxpayers, he can't take any deductions in the Victory tax column.

The deductions leave his income tax net income as $4175. But his Victory tax net income is still $4640.

He must compute his earned income credit. He writes in his earned net income (Item 1 on Page 1, compensation after deductible expenses), $4640, and his net income (Item 18, Page 1) of $4175. His earned income credit is 10 per cent of the smaller figure. That makes it $417.50.

He answers the questions at the bottom of the page, and turns to Page 4.

There he writes his income tax net income, $4175, and subtracts his personal exemption ($1200) and credit for dependents ($350), leaving $2625 as his surtax net income. Next he deducts his earned income credit ($417.50) to find the amount subject to normal tax—$2207.50.

Comes now some multiplication.

His normal tax is 6 per cent of $2207.50 or $132.45.

Next the surtax on $2625. On the first $2000 (at 13 per cent) it's $260. On the other $625, at 16 per cent, it's $100. He sets down the total surtax, $360.

The two taxes, $132.45 and $360, are added as Item 10—$492.45. This also is carried down as Item 12.

Figuring Victory Tax.

His Victory tax net income (from Page 1) is $4640. The 624 exemption is subtracted, leaving $4016. The Victory tax before credits is 5 per cent of that, or $200.80.

As a married man with one child, Aloysius gets a credit of 42 per cent of this tax or $84.34. So his net Victory tax is $116.46. This tax is entered higher on the page under Line 15. Added to the other taxes that makes a total of $608.91.

At this point Aloysius runs into the "forgiveness feature."

His tax for 1942 was $340.08. Three-fourths of it is "forgiveness." That's three times $80.02, or $240.06. The remaining $59.02 is carried out to the tax column and added to the other taxes.

Thus Marblehead finds his total tax liability is $668.93.

So now he lists how much of that he already has paid: $431.60 taken out of his pay; $170.04 he paid last March and June on 1942 taxes; $17 he paid in September and December on his declaration of estimated tax. Total payments—$618.64.

That leaves an unpaid balance of $75.29.

Now our married taxpayer returns to page 1.

He lists that unpaid balance of $75.29. He can postpone until next year the payment of one-half the unforgiven portion of tax (line 19-C on page 4). That's half of $37.64, or $18.82.

This figure goes on page 1, where it is subtracted, leaving $32.78 Aloysius must send in with his return.

SPECIAL ELECTION APRIL 4

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 25 (AP).—Gov. Forrest C. Donnell yesterday called a special election in the Fifth Legislative District of St. Louis April 4 to elect a successor to State Representative Phillips W. Moss, Republican, who died last week.

The Governor would not comment when asked if the April 4 special election call indicated the likelihood of a special session of the Legislature soon after that date. He has announced he is considering asking the Legislature to revise voting laws for service men.

COURT PROCEDURE PROPOSAL HITS CONVENTION SNAG

Judicial Committee Votes
Both Ways on Plan to Let Supreme Court Set
Practice Rules.

By CURTIS A. BETTS
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 25.—The Judicial Department Committee of the Constitutional Convention struck a snag yesterday in attempting to frame a progressive judicial article for the proposed new Constitution, when it reached a tentative provision taking from the Legislature the power to make rules of practice and procedure for the courts and placing the power in the Supreme Court.

This is a recognized judicial reform which has been bitterly and successfully opposed in the Legislature at nearly every session in the last 15 years by reactionary lawyers and lawyer-legislators with extensive practice in the criminal courts.

Final Action Deferred.
Under the leadership of Delegate O. C. Tee of Hamilton, opponents of the proposed change were successful in obtaining a vote of 10 to 8 in favor of retaining the power in the Legislature, but the action later was reconsidered and the committee voted, 15 to 3, in favor of court control of procedure. However, later the committee, consisting wholly of lawyers, became involved in a legalistic maze over the technical meaning of the words "practice," "procedure" and "pleading," and final action on the section was deferred until court decisions closely defining the words could be examined.

Tee was aided by Delegates O. E. Brown of Ozark and M. E. Ford of Maryville. Ford, a former State Senator, who as a legislator was a leader for judicial reform, has taken a position consistently in defense of legislative power, that position being the basis of his opposition to a change in the present law.

Proponents Surprised.
Advocates of the change were taken by surprise when they met defeat in the first vote yesterday, the committee having previously gone on record tentatively as favoring it. They immediately swung into action and succeeded in obtaining a reconsideration. Chairman Richard Righter of Kansas City, former Gov. Guy B. Park of Platte City, Charles H. Mayer of St. Joseph, Alroy S. Phillips of St. Louis and Claude Arnold of Puxico delivered vigorous arguments in support of placing the power in the courts.

Park said the people had become disgusted with delays in the courts and that the delays were largely due to the antiquated procedure set up by the Legislature. "The lawyers on this committee," he said, "should not imitate the lawyers in the Legislature and those who are opposed to progress."

Mayer, a lawyer of many years' experience, who has virtually retired from practice, said there had been a heavy falling off in the business of the courts, and consequently in the business of lawyers. "The people are sick and tired of the law's delays," he said. "They have created many administrative agencies which are not governed by the rules of procedure set up for the courts, and where many matters are decided expeditiously."

Technical Question Raised.
After it appeared that the matter had been disposed of, Brown raised a question as to the technical meaning of the word "procedure" and moved that it be stricken out. He feared that it would give the Supreme Court the power to change the rules of evidence.

Legal dictionaries were sent for and a hasty examination failed to satisfy the delegates, there being some support for the theory that rules of evidence might be included. Mayer suggested that the language be changed to cover "pleading and practice," but this, too, resulted in an extended controversy and the decision was made to defer action until the lawyers could look up the law.

The committee expects to have the judicial article, with the exception of the portion dealing with the selection of judges, completed within the next week. The selection section, which includes the question of the retention of the nonpartisan court plan for appellate judges and circuit and probate judges in St. Louis and Kansas City, will be taken up March 2.

UNION CARBIDE REPORTS

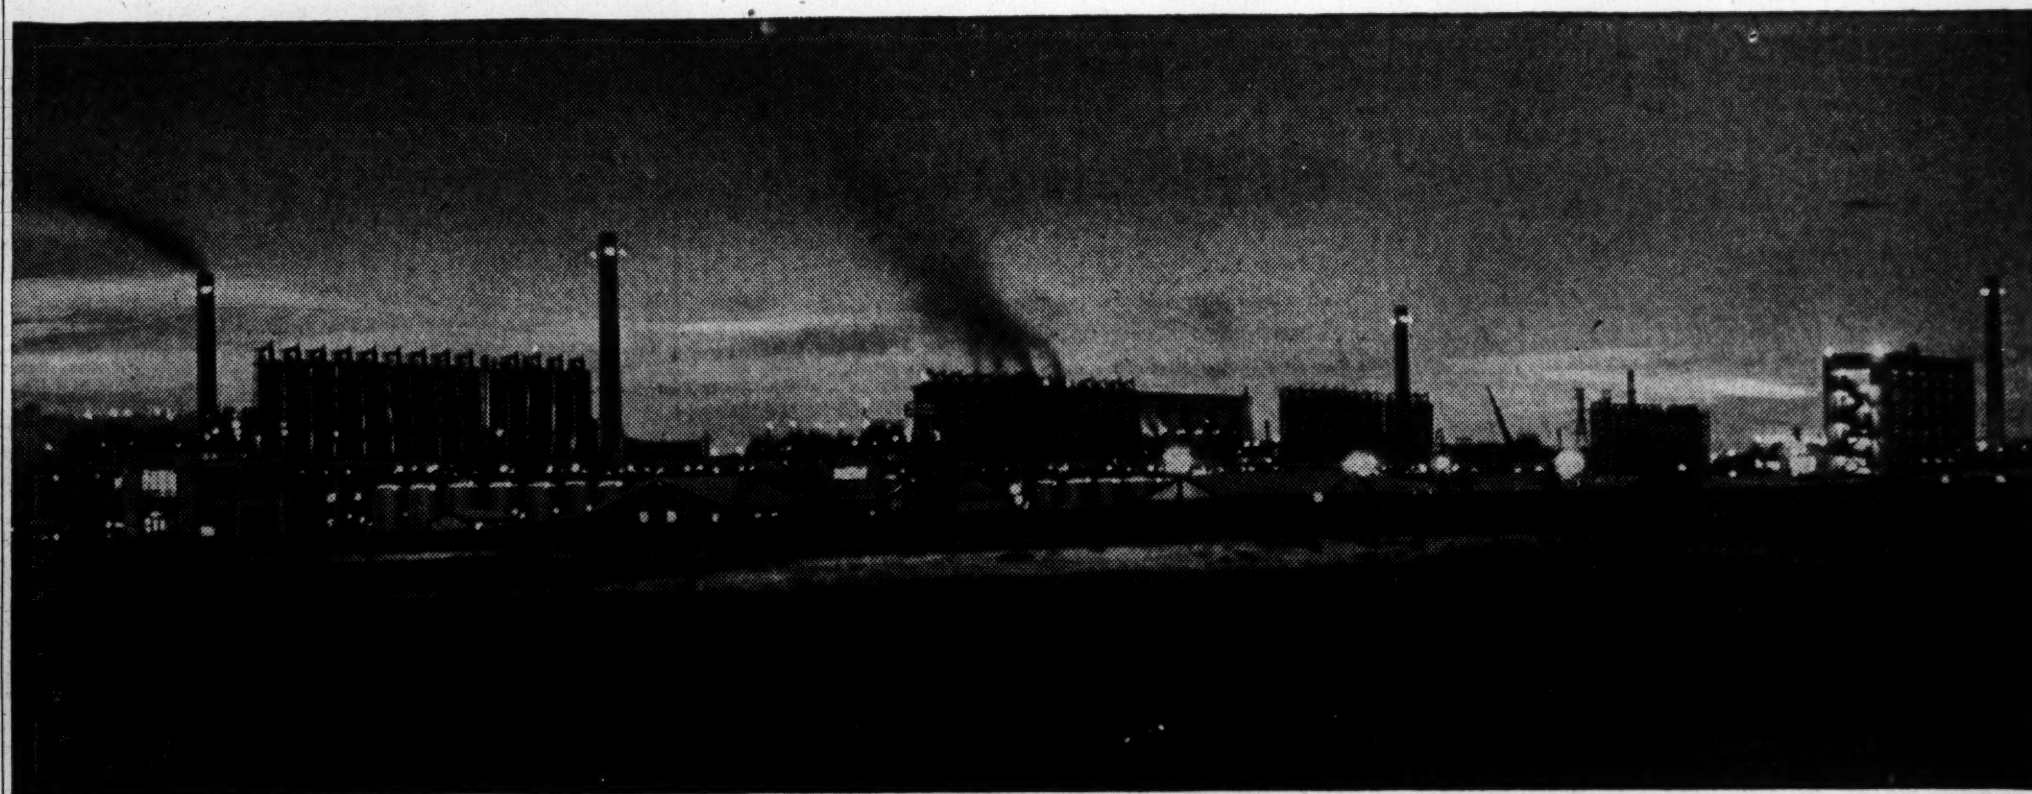

first full-year's production of

BUTADIENE

for the Government's Synthetic Rubber Program

(INSTITUTE, W. VA. PLANT)

FEBRUARY 18, 1943—FEBRUARY 18, 1944

Night view of the immense butadiene plant at Institute, W. Va.

ONE YEAR AGO THIS MONTH the first tank car of butadiene was shipped from the Government's large integrated rubber project at Institute, W. Va. This historic shipment came from the immense butadiene plant which was designed and built by CARBIDE AND CARBON CHEMICALS CORPORATION for the Government's Defense Plant Corporation—and is being operated by this Unit of UCC, for the Rubber Reserve Company,

FIRST YEAR'S PRODUCTION OVER THE RATED CAPACITY—that is the record of this huge 80,000-ton-per-year plant during its first twelve months! This has been accomplished in spite of the many inherent problems that had to be solved in starting a wholly new project of this magnitude.

Over 8/10 of a short ton of butadiene is required to make about one long ton of Buna S type synthetic rubber. Butadiene from this plant during the past year has provided more than 90,000 long tons of synthetic rubber for the Nation's requirements, both military and essential civilian. The delivery of this all important ingredient also has made possible early production of synthetic rubber under the Government's program.

Business men, technicians, teachers, and others are invited to send for the book XX-32 "Butadiene and Styrene for Buna S Synthetic Rubber from Grain Alcohol" which explains what these plants do, and what their place is in the Government's rubber program.

NOW HUGE BUTADIENE PRODUCER—although originally designed to produce 80,000 tons annual capacity, the Institute plant is now delivering butadiene at a rate of more than 100,000 tons per year. An identical plant using Carbide's process was put into operation by the Koppers United Company in September, 1943, at Kobuta, near Pittsburgh, Pa.

OVER 75% OF THE TOTAL PRODUCTION OF BUTADIENE for the Government's synthetic rubber program in 1943 came from the alcohol process developed by CARBIDE AND CARBON CHEMICALS CORPORATION.

In addition to the plant at Institute, Carbide made available plans for the large plant at Kobuta, which was built and is being operated for the Government by Koppers United Company.

CARBIDE AND CARBON CHEMICALS CORPORATION also has designed and built for the Defense Plant Corporation, and is operating for the Rubber Reserve Company, another large butadiene plant at Louisville, Ky.

RUSSIA MAKING ALLIANCES TO PROTECT SELF IN EVENT COLLECTIVE SECURITY FAILS

Basic Principles of Foreign Policy Unchanged—Definite Allied Views on Post-war Reich Would Aid—Attack on Vatican More Anti-Political Than Anti-Religious.

By DAVID M. NICHOL

Copyright, 1944, by Chicago Daily News—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
MOSCOW, Feb. 25 (By Radio).

EVENTS of the last few weeks have produced the impression abroad that Allied relations with the Soviet Union are on less firm ground than previously and have created some bewilderment about the general lines of Moscow's policy.

In the opinion of qualified observers here, there is no reason to believe that relations are weakening at all or that Moscow is unwilling in any sense to fulfill the obligations it undertook here and at Teheran. What bewilderment has occurred is the result largely of failure to understand a few basic principles of the Soviet Union's foreign policy.

Moscow's requirements are no different now than they were six months ago, or have been for most of the war period. They include security from attack, establishment of friendly neighboring governments, incorporation of Western Ukraine and White Russian territories, which ethnologically belong to this country, and certainty that Germany will not emerge again in the predictable future as a threat to the peace of Europe.

Pacts as Bulwark.

In pursuance of these aims, Moscow is following a program which is one of the causes of the existing confusion. It seems prepared to have these requirements carried out under some such system of collective action as was envisioned at the Moscow conference.

But the Soviet Union, likewise, is taking precautions against possible failure of such a program; it, therefore, is undertaking to build a structure of alliances which would only become important if collective security appears unworkable for any reason.

This is the explanation of Russia's pact with Czechoslovakia and equally of the Soviets' expressed desire for the creation of a "strong and independent Poland." In this connection, one editorial writer makes the reasonable assertion that "friendship and independence of nations are not mutually exclusive," but on the contrary, are the logical outcome of a relationship based on a common battle against a common enemy.

Among other causes of uncertainty abroad are the Supreme Soviet's decision creating foreign commissariats for the 16 republics and a series of newspaper articles which have included: "Attacks on Wendell Willkie, publication of the much-quoted 'Cairo Peace Rumor,' sharp criticism of the Vatican, and the newest charge that exchanged German prisoners are being sent to this front.

Fears Seem Baseless.

The decision to grant increased authority to the republics of the Soviet Union seems to be the normal evolution of a government which has been highly centralized and now finds it necessary to shift some of this responsibility away from Moscow. Foreign affairs are concerned, it must be admitted that there are immense differences of interest, as between the Ukraine and its immediate European neighbors, as contrasted with the Far Eastern districts of this vast country.

The argument of some persons that this is nothing more than a devious plot to increase peace conference representation is hardly realistic. The Soviet Union's postwar position will depend on its geography, its resources and the victories its armies are now winning. Whether this is advanced by one or 16 spokesmen can make little difference.

The newspaper attacks, it must be admitted, have been bitter. The extreme language in which they have been couched, however, is not unusual in connection with domestic problems in the Soviet Union, which are mostly unnoticed outside. It is a form of leading and influencing public opinion, which has produced results at home in many cases. It was evolved without regard for the sensitivity of foreigners, but when applied to these external affairs, it sometimes gives an exaggerated impression.

There is reason to believe that the Soviet Government now recognizes this fact.

It is understood, for example, that there will be no more communication with the Polish Government through such channels, but that in the future, in event of their occurrence at all, will be handled through normal diplomatic means.

Attack on Vatican.

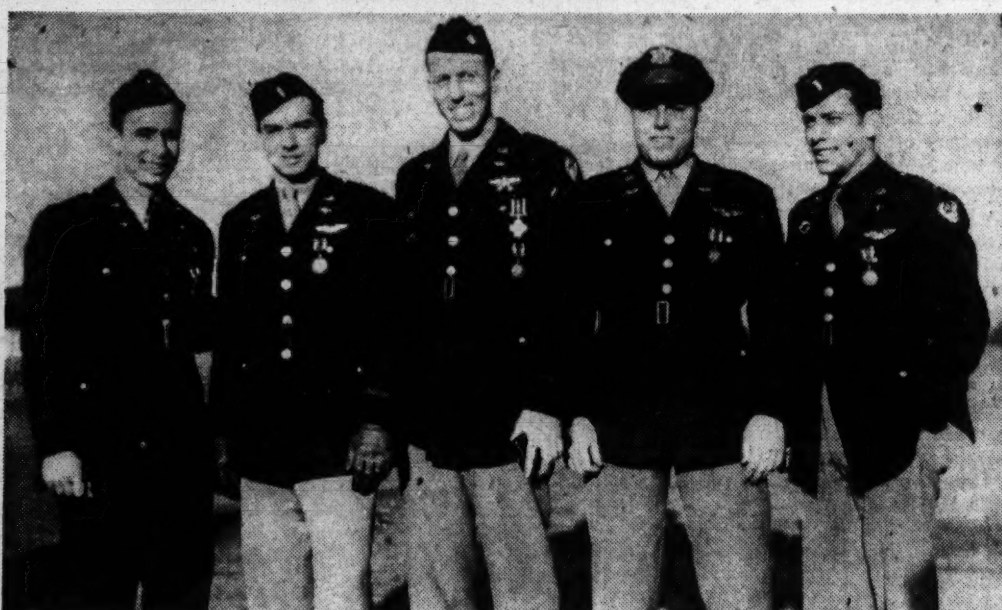

The attack on the Vatican is not anti-religious as much as it is against political activity by the Church. It is not a wholly new accusation nor has it been confined to the Soviet Union.

The Willkie attack was written by a veteran Soviet journalist. It was obviously less intended as criticism of an individual than as another expression of Moscow's determination that the Baltic states should not be considered in any other light than as Soviet republics.

It is a policy which the Allied governments at least tacitly have recognized by omitting to include the question on the agenda of the Moscow conference.

The "Cairo Peace Rumor" strikes close to home. If there is any subject about which genuine concern exists among the Soviet

Why the Allies Do Not Invade In West Now

4 Men Needed Behind Lines for One at Front—Supply Problem.

By WES GALLAGHER

LONDON, Feb. 25 (AP).

WHY don't we hurl large forces across the English Channel and end the war?

This is a question many Americans and Britons are asking. The blunt answer is: "Because the Germans might fling them right back at us."

If just the opening of a Western front would bring victory, it would be a different question, but it is going to take weeks and months of the bloodiest kind of fighting on the Continent before Adolf Hitler collapses.

Because this task is more than one of a mere landing of 50 divisions. In the average man's mind a division means about 15,000 men, but the experience in Africa, Sicily and Italy indicate that to supply one fighting man at the front it takes from four to eight behind the front when bases are thousands of miles away and supplies must be unloaded from ships to smaller craft, unloaded on land and carried to depots, sorted and then taken to the front.

The longer men must fight on foreign soil the more essential do the behind-the-lines soldiers become as the war moves away from the ports and supply becomes more complex. Therefore, a division to a military man means handling not 15,000 men, but 60,000 or more. Once they are ashore, it takes tons of shipping to keep them going. This is known as the "tail" of an army.

When one recognizes that 600 Germans have been able to boost their strength along the "west wall" to 60 divisions it is easy to understand the determination of the Allied high command not to move until it is certain that the punch will carry through to victory.

Despite countless thousands of dead left in Russia, the German Army must suffer much more killing before a collapse comes. Its reserves have been drained almost dry by the Russian front but frontline strength is almost as formidable as ever and not until the dedicated divisions cannot be replaced is the end near for Hitler.

This is going to take many fierce battles in Europe. It is recognized too that the tremendous Russian punch which has amazed the world cannot go on indefinitely. The Red Army cannot ignore the fundamental laws of battle, and the farther away its supply lines stretch across devastated areas, the weaker becomes the frontline drive, just as the German attack faltered and failed at the gates of Moscow.

VIENNA EVACUATION REPORT

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 25 (AP).—A Budapest dispatch to the Morgenthau Tiddingen today said Vienna authorities were preparing to evacuate the former Austrian capital beginning March 1.

ST. LOUIS SET UP POSTOFFICE IN MARSHALLS UNDER FIRE

Facing machine gun fire and air bombardment, Staff Sgt. William L. Shetterly, former postal employee at the Cabanne branch office, now on leave with the Marines, set up a postoffice on one of the Marshall Islands even before it had been secured, his friends here have learned.

Assisted by two other Marines, he carried ashore more than 20,000 V-mail forms, apparatus for sending V-mail and other postal equipment to establish an operating postoffice which dispatched more than 5000 letters in less than 24 hours after landing.

Sgt. Shetterly, 44, a veteran of World War I, formerly resided with his wife at 6772 Dillenberger avenue. She is now employed in Washington, D. C. His brother, Ralph Shetterly of 1029A Art Hill place, has learned that a citation for this action will be awarded Sgt. Shetterly.

Nazis Guilty of Glaring Mistakes In Effort to Wipe Out Beachhead

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ON THE ANZIO BEACHHEAD, Feb. 23 (Delayed) (AP).

THE German army's weakness in material and morale are exposed to world view in the drawnout battle of the beachhead below Rome.

Twice this month the Nazis have boasted that Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's Fourteenth Army was poised for a knockout blow.

Daily the German Propaganda Ministry sucked every drop of encouragement from the "campaign of annihilation" being waged against the beachhead.

But somewhere on the Russian steppes or in the African desert—the German army apparently lost its will to win.

Reduction of a beachhead is a highly technical military assignment requiring a tight co-ordination of all the besieging forces, alert opportunism to exploit each advantage and a fiery dashing spirit among all field commanders.

Claring Nazi Errors.

If battles are won by the General making the fewest mistakes, then the Germans already have lost this one.

Among the now glaring German mistakes are these:

1. Underestimation of the fighting strength of the Allied forces around Anzio and consequently the failure to build up a striking force with an advantage in size of at least two to one.

2. Failure to equal or exceed the Allies in firepower and unity of artillery action. The Germans are using more long-range guns than the Allies, but they are inferior in medium and light calibers. Their artillery concentrations have been much less effective than the joint barrages of the Americans and British. Allied artillery again and again strikes the enemy like a bulldozer, clearing out entire zones where the Germans are trying to assemble troops for an attack.

3. Helter-skelter mixture of infantry units in a single operation. Companies from different battalions from different divisions are thrown into conglomerate forces and suddenly thrust into strange sectors under new commanders. Because of an obvious German shortage of good officers from the rank of captain to colonel, the leadership frequently falters at the crucial moment for the groping troops.

4. Bad timing, both as to the start and the continuity of attacks which the Allies were prepared in advance to break. Teutonic stubbornness in persisting with an operation ill-fated from the outset cost thousands of lives on several occasions. On the other hand, certain attacks were discontinued just when a big tactical advantage had been won.

Impossible Promises.

5. Phoney pep talks to fresh troops based on impossible promises that the beachhead would be crushed within a matter of hours.

6. Failure to recognize that the beachhead is a strategic asset, not a tactical one. It is a base for operations, not a goal in itself.

Pyle Describes Night March In the Mud

So Dark He Followed White Map on Soldier's Back as Beacon.

By ERNIE PYLE

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

IN ITALY, Feb. 25 (By Wireless). AFTER the marching order came it took our company about 15 minutes to get itself together, with the head of the line assembled at the appointed place in front of the kitchen tent at the edge of the olive grove.

It was midnight. The night was utterly black. It was the dark of the moon, and thick, low clouds further darkened the sky. "In two years overseas, this is the blackest night we've ever moved," one soldier said.

With a couple of others, I felt my way from our pig shed down to where we thought the kitchen tent was. We knew we were near it, but we couldn't see it.

"It's up ahead about 50 feet," one soldier said.

I butted in and said, "No, it's over to the right about 30 feet." Just at that moment a flash of fire from one of our nearby cannon brightened the countryside for a split second, and we saw the tent. It was six feet in front of us. That's how dark it was.

Let's Get Along.

ONE by one the platoon leaders followed their way up to the head of the column, reported their platoons ready in line, and felt their way back. Finally the lieutenant said, "Let's go."

There's no military formality about a night movement of infantry. You don't try to keep step. Nobody says "Forward march," or any of that parade ground stuff. After a rest the lieutenant says, "All right, let's get along." And everybody gets up and starts.

In trying to get out of the orchard we lost our various places. Finally everybody stopped and called one another's name in order to get reassembled. The lieutenant and the sergeant would call for me occasionally to make sure I was still along.

When we fell in again, I was marching behind Sgt. Vincent Conner. He was a good soldier. His name is "Pete." We hadn't gone far when we were stopped.

U. S. Winning Military War Against Japan, but Can Lose Political One, Weller Asserts

Correspondent in St. Louis Talk Says We Must Consider Permanent Use of Islands, Taken at Great Cost, to Insure Peace—Japanese Planning Ahead.

By RUFUS JARMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE United States is winning the war of arms against Japan, "slowly and at enormous and unparalleled expense, but we are losing the war in the Pacific politically," George Weller, war correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News, told members of the Contemporary Club last night at a meeting in the Missouri Athletic Club.

This nation, Weller said, is expending the lives of its men and its treasures of resources in fortifying islands of the Pacific and in taking them from the Japanese, without giving thought to achieving permanent use of them in the postwar world. They will be needed in years to come as bastions, he said, if a series of future wars between this nation and Japan is to be prevented.

The Japanese made some disastrous mistakes early in this war, which probably will cost them the victory at arms, Weller asserted.

"But the Japanese are a very teachable people," he said. "They will not make the same mistakes in their next war against America, for which all Japanese leaders are planning, if they lose this one."

Weller, who won the Pulitzer prize last year for his story of an appendicitis operation undersea on a submarine sailor by a pharmacist's mate, returned to the United States several weeks ago after watching the war for two years in the Southwest Pacific. He earlier had witnessed the fall of Greece to the Germans, then the fall of Singapore, and later the fall of Java, from which he sent his last dispatch minutes before the Japanese took over.

Just the First War.

"This probably will not be our last war with Japan," Weller said. "Every Japanese officer wants another one. I remember seeing at the abandoned enemy airfield at Munda a note that a Japanese colonel had planned on a tree for our inspection. It said: 'This is just the first war.'"

"The margin of American inventiveness over the enemy, in designing weapons of war, is very narrow, indeed, and we are not better fighters," the correspondent went on. "We are simply overpowering the enemy for the moment because we have the resources to do it with. Japan is slowly being obliterated by the sheer force of our arms."

In the next war with Japan, perhaps the United States will not have the preponderance of resources it enjoys in this one."

Weller called attention to this nation's lavish expenditure of resources, to the fact that one-third of the topsoil of the United States has eroded, and to Secretary Harold Ickes' recent statement that "America cannot oil another war."

STORM OVER THE TAX BILL

Congress Needs Prodding

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am amazed and alarmed at the recent turn in events in Congress following the President's recent veto of the tax bill.

The President's veto message was indeed strong, but it is becoming increasingly evident that Congress needs some strong prodding to bring it to its feet. Congress does not have a very good wartime record outside of the appropriation measures which it has passed without question. Instead of swallowing hard and accepting their obligation to the nation, Congressmen have reacted violently with petty rancor and childish stubbornness.

If ever Congress labored for six or eight months on a mountain, and brought forth a mouse, this tax bill is it.

Instead of working as elected representatives of this nation, and putting the welfare of this nation above all else, we now find Congressmen joining together and falling over one another in an attempt to save their personal feelings. Their personal feelings mean more to them than any honor this nation can bestow upon them.

Some members seem to have forgotten that the President has the constitutional power and duty to veto a tax bill or any other bill which he thinks is not beneficial to our nation. What really hurt most was the sharp veto message. The shoe must indeed have pinched hard in some cases. Those whom the shoe did not pinch did not fly off the handle.

It is very unfortunate that this has happened. Congress and President Wilson parted company during the last war and the result was a serious blow to our country and to the peace of the whole world. Are we now seeing history repeat itself?

I think we should try to shame Congress into doing what is right, as was done on the congressional pension bill. We must make Congress realize that the stern conditions of war call for overriding of personal feelings and ambitions.

Voters Support Tax Veto

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I air-mailed your fine editorial supporting the President's veto of the tax bill to Senator Clark. I had very little hope, in view of the Senator's past record, that he would vote to sustain the veto.

If only Congress could be made to understand that the voters realize it is creating a smoke-screen to cover up its real lack of statesmanship by overriding the President's veto!

Please keep up the good work.

IVA RODENBAUGH.

Congressional Do-Nothings

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The cartoon in the Post-Dispatch of Feb. 19, "All That Saved Him," is one of the best, and how true! Again President Roosevelt has tried to save the country by vetoing the tax bill, just as he saved us all—bankers, big business and the little man—in 1933.

Back in 1856, the "Know-Nothings," a political party, sprang up, but soon disappeared. It has occurred to me that "Do-Nothings" would be a very good name for our Congress. E. B. W.

Lilliputian Senators

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

On his fifth voyage, Gulliver returned to Lilliput and was elected President. As he was 12 times as tall as the average Lilliputian and 1728 times as big in brain, he saw that a war with Blefuscu was inevitable, and managed to get the Lilliputians to prepare for it.

With the war at a crucial stage, Gulliver asked the pigmy Parliament for a tax bill to raise 10% billions of simoleons (corresponding to our dollars). But, fearing that their constituents, who wanted to win the war for survival but did not want to pay for it, would vote them out if they passed such a bill, the Lilliputian Senators offered him a bill to raise only about one-fifth of the amount. This Gulliver vetoed.

Parliament members whose high dignity and integrity had been insulted by his refusal to sign the tax bill they had framed, business men with whose divine right to run their businesses as they chose he had ventured to interfere, citizens out of sympathy with the war, those who had been howling about their taxes, and editors anxious to climb on the bandwagon of popular opposition, all began to loose a storm of tiny but barbed and venomous arrows at Gulliver's unprotected hands and face.

The end? Let's get Swift back from the River Styx to write it. No other hand could do the subject justice.

Mr. Roosevelt's Leadership

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I agree with the letter by Raymond Leslie Buell that Mr. Willkie's strong medicine is needed by the American people, but I disagree with him when he says the President's leadership has been supreme. Mr. Roosevelt did have the nerve to veto an inadequate tax bill sent to him by Congress.

LUCIEN N. BARNES.

Columbia, Mo.

A Defeat at Home

The fight which has erupted between the President and Congress in words of immoderacy and bitter violence on both sides is beginning to assume recognizable form.

On one side there is the theory that total war should be supported by total taxation. On the other is the theory that total war should be supported by no more taxation than circumstances conspicuously force us into accepting. The issue is high taxes or low taxes—both these terms being relative to the staggering vast demands of war, since the low taxes for total war which Congress proposes would amount to inordinately high taxes for normal times of peace.

The primary issue in the dispute, therefore, is whether or not the tax bill is adequate to total war. Mr. Roosevelt says it is "wholly ineffective." The Treasury shares his view. The leader of the Republican party, Mr. Willkie, goes even further. He condemns as "far too low" both the two and a half billions granted by Congress and the 10½ billions demanded by the President and the Treasury, and declares the bill should provide more nearly for 16 billions.

Majority Leader Barkley, in his long statement castigating the President for the veto of the tax bill, interestingly and perhaps significantly enough never once contends that the measure is adequate, never once defends it in terms of sufficiency for total war.

Mr. Barkley says the amount provided by the bill is large, and he makes several comparisons to show how large it is. He compares it with the national debt before the First World War; with the cost of the Federal Government before the First World War; with the appropriation for relief in liberated countries; with mustering-out pay. But all the comparisons which Mr. Barkley makes are irrelevant.

The tax measure is not, unfortunately, intended to run the Federal Government for the fiscal year 1912, or to apply on the national debt of that year, or to relieve the suffering of freed peoples, or to provide mustering-out pay for our fighting men. If it were, it might serve very handsomely.

It is, instead, intended to fight the war that is on our hands at this very moment. The only comparison that makes any difference in the world is comparison with the requirements of the war we are fighting—but that comparison makes all the difference in the world.

Two great facts of our national future are being determined now, not only by the results of the dispute between the President and Congress, but also by the terms on which their differences of opinion are argued.

In point of time, the first is whether or not inflation is going to get the better of us. Shall our people suffer the cruel, needless, destructive economic war of uncontrolled economy at home, at the same time as they are called upon to suffer the loss and sorrow of physical war abroad—and all because their representatives in Congress lacked the vision and courage to protect them?

The second question is whether or not we shall emerge from the war with a crushing burden of debt. Mr. Willkie has very wisely pointed out that the nation will have many large and unusual expenses in the years just after the war. He has justly declared that it would be wrong, a shirking of our responsibility, for those of us who stay at home to call on our soldiers to pay, when they have won the war and returned home, any part of the war debt which we could and should have paid ourselves while the war was still in progress.

So far, the forces of timid taxation have won. The power of veto, by which the President has twice held off a congressional assault upon subsidies, another sector of the anti-inflation front, has been overruled in the House by a vote of all but three of the voting Republicans, joined by 99 out of 188 Democrats.

The Roosevelt-haters, the forces of reaction, are having their day in the field. The hope of a Roosevelt defeat for a fourth term, and encouragement that taxation will be more along the lines of special interests, enliven the stock market.

The war went well on the overseas fronts yesterday, but we lost a battle at home.

A Plan for "Memorial Monday"

If a bill just approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee becomes law, its effect is likely to be just the opposite of what its sponsors have in mind. The object is to insure that proper respect is paid to the memory of the men and women who have lost their lives in the country's service in this war. It is a proper objective which will be universally approved, but the method provided to achieve this end is presidential proclamation of a "Memory Monday" each month as an occasion for services and ceremonies.

Memorial day is formally set aside once a year for this purpose. Many cities, including St. Louis, are planning memorials to honor their war dead. America will not forget those who are giving their lives in this war, and it needs no such artificial reminders as a monthly day of dedication, which would in time become commonplace by repetition. The best honor the country can pay its fallen fighters is to carry on resolutely the tasks of war, and to strive for a real peace that will not make their sacrifices vain. These are duties for every day, and their fulfillment is a far better tribute than parades and set speeches on the first Monday of every month.

The Nazis should be finding out by now that total war is something you can get totally tired of.

Eat Cabbage and Conquer

Some people like cabbage and some do not; nevertheless, cabbage is the official victory food for Feb. 24-March 4. Cabbage, says the War Food Administration, is almost too plentiful. To non-admirers, cabbage may seem plentiful at any time, but WFA says positively that the winter harvest of cabbage is estimated to be 74 per cent larger than last year's.

A few kind words for the cabbage would, therefore, be not only true and beautiful, but also patriotic. It is virtually impossible to make cabbage anything but delicious. This fine vegetable of many personalities is, to begin with, excellent raw and alone. In the intermediate states, it is something to write home for more of, either as ordinary slaw or as the German type of slaw, with bacon drippings and bits of bacon. Cooked, it is one wonderful taste when accompanied by side-meat, and an equally wonderful taste of an altogether different order when cooked in milk.

Here's to the cabbage, to the succulent, crunchy, odoriferous oleracea capitata—a mouthful in name, a zestful mouthful in person.

When War Jobs End

Termination of war contracts is rapidly bringing into existence problems which generally have been regarded as belonging exclusively to the postwar period. The principal problem is unemployment, and it is becoming clear now how this is related to the shifting emphasis of industrial activity even while the war continues.

The conference held in St. Louis yesterday, under the auspices of the Contract Termination Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, was in the nature of a clinic, with responsible officers from the War and Navy departments directing attention to helpful procedures. This meeting was told that already more than 10,000 prime contracts have been terminated, involving perhaps 10 times as many subcontracts. There is prospect of cancellation in the next few months of additional contracts involving about two and a half billion dollars in orders.

If contract terminations thus far have not caused noticeable unemployment, it is because new war contracts still are being placed in large volume. The time will come when this no longer is true, and labor released from war jobs will have to find employment in production for civilian consumption if it is to be employed at all. How urgent this problem is likely to be is seen from the fact that 50 billions annually of our production is for carrying on the war.

What disturbs industry about contract termination, and this is of great concern to labor, is the lag between production for war and production for peace. The contractors assert that, unless they are paid promptly what is due them on the contracts that are canceled, they will not have sufficient ready capital for quick conversion to peacetime production. The Baruch report recognized this and recommended speedy determination of the Government's liability on contracts and prompt payment in full.

One of the difficulties the Army and Navy have encountered in attempting quick settlement of war contracts is the failure of managements to present their claims, promptly, fully and with the supporting proof which ordinary prudence requires. For example, 400 claims now pending for Army settlement have been delayed six months or longer because of failure of the contractors to give required information. In many cases, not even inventories of the finished goods on hand and materials in process had been supplied.

Industry has an obligation to co-operate fully in every way that will expedite the settlement of contracts. By doing so, it will speed up reconversion to production of civilian goods and will help to guard against unemployment and depression.

Gerald Smith Hires a Hall

The doctrines of Gerald L. K. Smith are obnoxious to the great majority of St. Louisans. Nevertheless, the city has a tradition of free speech even "for the thought we hate," to quote the late Justice Holmes' fine phrase, and it is in keeping with this tradition that the Municipal Auditorium Commission has approved Smith's application to rent the building's Convention Hall for a rally of his supporters.

To bar this apostle of reaction and defeatism from the hall would be to martyrize him, to give him a point for demagogic oratory in an effort to gain sympathy and support. As it is, he will be operating in the open, where he can be watched. St. Louisans by and large have enough confidence in democracy to believe that it will survive even though Gerald Smith is allowed to hire a hall for his roaring and ranting.

On Finding Airport Sites

The suggestion of Oliver L. Parks, head of the Parks Air College, that a small landing field for light planes be built on the central riverfront, encountered various objections at Wednesday's meeting of the Municipal Airport Commission.

Milton M. Kinney, chairman of the commission, was not impressed by the suggestion and thought the Federal Government, which owns the land, would not consent to its use as anything but a park. J. Gates Williams, head of the Chamber of Commerce Air Board, said the suggestion was impracticable, while Julian C. Spotts, superintendent of the area for the National Park Service, did not think such use of the land could be made under the terms of the Historic Sites Act.

With all respect for the formidable question marks raised by these and other men, the necessities of the Air Age, if St. Louis is to be ready for it, will call for daring thinking and the will to overcome obstacles. The central riverfront site is one of a list of 20 possible sites which Parks says will be needed for private flying and shuttle service after the war. No doubt there are objections to all these sites.

In the case of another major air field, the city has seen the difficulty of a meeting of minds. After extensive study of the question, resulting in pretty general agreement that Columbia Bottoms should be chosen as the city's major airport No. 2, a majority of the Board of Aldermen expressed their dissent, citing objections to the proposal.

Columbia Bottoms admittedly is not ideal, nor is Meramec Bottoms, the other site approved by the St. Louis County Planning Commission. Nor is the central riverfront ideal even for small planes because of high buildings and various other factors. But the city will find, as it goes deeper into the airport site problem, that somewhere along the line the search for the ideal must give way to the demands of reality.

It will find there are few sites for large or small planes that cannot be criticized, yet, if St. Louis is not to be a whistle stop on the air map of the future, the city will have to make the best of the sites that are available.

Doctors in the Army are traveling by plane and parachute. Nature seems to be gradually catching onto the stork idea.

"A POOR THING BUT MINE OWN"

The Will to Win the Future

This war, which at the start seemed only in defense of tradition, has become a struggle for the economic advancement of mankind, speaker declares; the promise of the postwar world is held to depend upon better distribution of a maximum production to all.

The Mirror of Public Opinion

From an Address by Paul Greer to the School of Mines and Metallurgy of the University of Missouri

The arrival of a scientific and rational age requires not only a change of method, but new spirit and vision.

The central fact of our times is that technological development has outstripped our social system. The great manifestations of aviation and electricity, the marriage of physics and chemistry, are offering the promise of abundance to a world in which there has never been enough light and warmth and food.

Between this bountiful field and its harvest lies the myth of over-production. Yet abundance finally can be made a blessing instead of a menace, once our instinctive distrust of a better world has been dispelled.

We may depend upon it, things will not snap back into their old shapes at war's end. A conflict that in its beginning seemed nothing more than a defense of the traditional way of life in the democracies has, in its later stages, become a planetary revolution with the objective of security and economic advancement for all mankind.

A Need for Reasonableness

The task of leadership from here on calls less for force and emotionalism than for a direct appeal to the reasonableness of man. If there is to come out of this war a wider life, the unfolding of the wings of the human spirit, this will not be by any physical overturn, but by an internal stirring in the hearts and minds of the people as individuals.

Nature still is rich, but man by his own lack of forethought has disinherited himself. It is not that we are without some immensely wealthy families in America, but I like to toy with the idea that even the richest among them, controlling this or that natural resource or industry, may be considered poorer than any peasant of Russia, where each citizen is co-owner of all the riches, developed or undeveloped, of his country.

Such criticism as I would make of the system of our Russian ally is that it is based on a producer interest rather than a consumer right. To possess great resources, and to be equipped with technical skill, are of small benefit until out of them come goods for our more adequate living. This recognition of the consumer is a basic postulate of a more reasoned world.

The bottleneck of distribution will hamper our best efforts at production under present conditions, for it now costs more to move goods into the hands of the consumer than to produce them. In 60 years from 1870, while the population of the United States trebled, the volume of production of goods increased ninefold. While only three and one-half times as many workers were able to multiply production nine times, those employed in distribution increased almost ninefold.

As consumers we have paid every cost, industrial and commercial, in our economic system. The problem of living, once personal and physical, now calls for group economic planning. It was an able engineer, Sidney A. Reeve, who wrote in that amazing book, "Modern Economic Tendencies":

"Man has never passed through a hideous social crisis which could not have been foreseen and prevented by a conservative, but courageous and timely, reliance upon wisdom which had been basic for centuries before. The irritating cause lies in fixed institutions, which remain unchanged while the needs of the times alter. It is neither the snobbish indifference at the top nor the ignorant bitterness at the bottom which causes crises, but intellectual timidity and inertia everywhere."

The Impact of Emotion

Up to now, such changes or reforms as have arisen have come less from the fact that they were reasonable than from a sense of outrage or insult that set emotions ablaze.

The costs of this war to America, like the costs of the long depression that preceded it, are to be measured only in the consumable goods that were not produced. This is why it is fundamentally so important to make sure of full production upon the outbreak of peace. We must immediately begin to manufacture all those consumer products, from clothing to chemicals and electrical supplies, that have been almost irreplaceable for the duration of the conflict.

Where we have the raw materials, the technique and the willing hands, everything is possible. It is by these things that men live, not by bookkeeping. If indeed we can bring our social and economic practices in line with the reality of our technical abilities, America need not suffer another period of unemployment, depression or lack of the best things of life.

The Existing Circumstances

From the Omaha World-Herald.

Perhaps you are tired of hearing about war bonds, patriotism, your duty to the boys in the foxholes, etc., etc. If so, skip the rest of this piece because it wouldn't interest you.

Among the letters which came to a certain desk in this newspaper office the other day was one containing a clipping. It was part of an advertisement from a Southern newspaper, supporting the fourth war loan drive, and it read as follows:

"You won't have to explain to ALL the boys in battle why you couldn't afford to buy that extra bond in the fourth war loan drive, etc."

Nazi Myth of Race Superiority Is Refuted by Scientific Data

"Race and Crime" by Willem Adriaan Bongers. (Columbia University Press, New York.)

From the Nazi-made wreckage of The Netherlands has come a book that gives the lie to one of Hitler's most poisonous doctrines, the myth of race superiority. It is the last work of the internationally famed University of Amsterdam criminologist, Prof. Willem Adriaan Bongers. With a barrage of statistics and carefully drawn conclusions, "Race and Crime" explodes the notion that some races are more predisposed to crime than others.

Bongers died in the same May, 1940, in which the Germans invaded Holland. One of the last things he did was to put his manuscript in the hands of Margaret Mathews Hordyk, who brought it to this country and translated it from the Dutch. Nowhere does the book show a trace of hysteria or partisanship; it is in the best academic tradition of calm analysis.

After summarizing the major European and American theories of the effect of race on crime, Prof. Bongers draws together the relevant statistical tables on the subject. Most of the book is devoted to white European groups because there is plenty of information about them. But there is a chapter on the Negroes in the United States, and American data on crime among immigrants.

By demonstrating again and again that the greater or lesser criminality of any group can be best explained by its role in society, Prof. Bongers demolishes the racialists. If, he points out, race determined crime, there would be no changes in the crime rates of various groups. Yet crime in Northern Europe has declined astonishingly in the past decades, although the "stock" is the same. And although their "race" is the same, men commit more crimes than women; people from one occupational class more than those from others.

Moreover, in the United States, there is a sharp drop in criminality among the sons and daughters of immigrants as compared with their parents. This indicates that where and, most important, how people are brought up and live will probably determine how many of them will turn to crime. No race can be said to be better or worse than any other, more or less prone to criminality.

Armed with irrefutable data, "Race and Crime" thus disposes of the Hitlerian pseudo-scientists. After fairly considering their work, Prof. Bongers concludes that they and all others who substitute "malevolence and nonsense" for honesty in this field "should be the objects of criminological studies rather than the authors of them."

Unusual Novel of the Southwest

"Dust in the Sun," by Niven Busch. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

This is an out-of-the-ordinary novel of the Southwest of the post-bellum period. Mr. Busch's great contribution is creation of Pearl Chavez—part-Indian wail and poor relation who moves in on the fabulous Spanish Bit ranch of Texas Senator Jackson T. McCanles and grows up. She dominates the book and—no mean accomplishment—in 246 pages of well-delineated characters—does most to maintain the chapter-to-chapter suspense.

The volume opens with a hanging, is spiced with killings, an old-fashioned train holdup, a threatened double lynching and a jail delivery. Should one ask more? Mr. Busch might have taken on the Civil War with his Scarlett O'Hara of the plains. But there is a paper shortage.

WALTER LIPPMANN

The Oil of Arabia

Oil is very important, yet is only one of many things about which we very much need to form a national policy for our dealings with the rest of the world. There are other essential raw materials of which our domestic reserves are dwindling. We have to arrange for the future of civil aviation, of merchant shipping, of radio, telegraph and telephone communications. We shall need a policy, for we have none now, covering many aspects of international trade, including the complicated subjects of cartels, tariffs and currency.

As yet the United States Government is not organized to deal with these questions. What happens is that some part of the Government becomes aware of some part of some problem, takes a position, has a talk with the President and obtains his approval and then announces a "policy." Other departments of the Government, equally or more concerned with the same subject, are often scarcely consulted. For example, the Army, as the Truman committee has pointed out, carried out the Canal project in Panama at a cost of $150,000,000 without consulting the Petroleum Administration or the chairman of the War Production Board.

And now Mr. Ickes has had the President's approval to committing the Government to building a pipeline from the Persian Gulf across Arabia and through either Palestine or Egypt to the Eastern Mediterranean. But on this project, which has the most complicated and far-reaching political and strategic effects on our foreign policy, the State Department would seem not to have been seriously consulted.

This is obviously not the way to conduct government.

What Is 'Assuring Access'?

We may take an example from the useful introductory report on petroleum matters just issued by the Truman committee. One of its conclusions is that with the depletion of our oil reserves in this hemisphere in sight, we must now recognize "the importance to the United States of assuring access to some of the petroleum resources in the Eastern Hemisphere."

This is undoubtedly true. But what we need to think about very clearly indeed is just what we mean by "assuring access." For of course, we have now and have had for some years very large oil concessions in the Eastern Hemisphere. In the Persian Gulf region, which is now the richest oil field yet discovered in the world, American interests have had since 1933-34 about 40 per cent of the so-called proved oil reserves. The British and Dutch interests, which work together, have about 54 per cent. In the Netherlands East Indies, American companies have what is said to be about a half-interest in the proved reserves. These are, of course, estimates on which experts differ considerably.

When we remember that, in addition to our domestic reserves, American companies have also a 70 per cent interest in the Caribbean area, it is evident that we have a very fair share of the known oil reserves of the world. The real question then is to know what the Truman committee means, and what the Government ought to mean, by "assuring access" to the oil of the Eastern Hemisphere. The Persian Gulf is a very long distance from the United States. By sea, when the Mediterranean is open, it is something like 8500 miles. If Mr. Ickes builds his pipeline into the Eastern Mediterranean, the distance for tankers will be cut down to something like 5300 miles.

Now the first question we have to ask ourselves is whether and how a great oil reserve in the Middle East, which delivers oil through a pipeline that ends in Palestine or in Egypt, gives assured access for the United States. It would not have given assured access in this war until Eisenhower, Alexander and Montgomery had recovered North Africa and had conquered Sicily and South Italy. The Ickes contract with the American companies carries with it a provision of a reserve for the Army and Navy of one billion barrels. But the pipeline line taps the reserve only if the Army and Navy are certain that in time of war they can send tankers across the Mediterranean to the end of the pipeline.

We Have to Make a Deal. It follows, does it not, that in order to have assured access to this oil reserve in the Middle East, we must be absolutely sure either that the Mediterranean cannot be closed against us by 1940 to 1945, or that we have such naval command of the Atlantic and the Indian Oceans that tankers can pass safely around Africa. This means, we must think clearly about it, that in order to make a sound oil policy we have first to make a naval agreement with Britain and with France and with the other Mediterranean countries, to see to it that we can always be sure of getting to the oil reserves.

If we do not do that, these oil reserves in the Middle East may be of no more use to us in time of war than if we had acquired large rubber plantations in Malaya and the East Indies.

We have now gone as far as we can by means of the excellent personal relations between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt and with general principles like those adopted at Moscow. We now need something more permanent than a great friendship and something more concrete than general principles. We need a military agreement covering the use of bases, the continuation of the combined staffs and the maintenance of a proper level of armaments. Then we can solve these economic questions, but not sooner. For they can be treated as purely commercial questions only after the deeper questions of security have been settled.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Uncertain Relations With the British

It is time we were facing some unpleasant truths. Despite beneath-the-surface expressions of good will that come from both sides, relations with our chief ally, Great Britain, are deteriorating. Too many Americans, in uniform and out, are returning from the war fronts with a grudge against the British. They air these grudges privately in Washington to their superiors, in little off-the-record lunches, in futile protests to the powers that be.

But invariably they are told to keep still. Don't say a word! You'll be considered anti-British. Hush, hush!

Nothing, it seems to me, could be more stupid and, in the long run, really more "anti-British." Co-operation between English-speaking peoples in the postwar world is a prime essential. But co-operation can come only on a basis of understanding and reality.

That is why certain things need saying so badly. If everything is postponed, until the end of the war, then there is likely to be an explosion that may permanently impair a sound working relationship.

The Issue of Burma. The latest disaffection is over the failure, in spite of rather generous resources to the campaign from India to retake Burma. Because of the approaching monsoon, it is now almost too late for any significant action. American commanders in the Far Eastern theater are said to be bitterly disappointed in Lord Louis Mountbatten, whose appointment to the India-Burma command was taken as a pledge of major operations and not in some distant future.

The Washington Post, which can scarcely be considered "anti-British," in an editorial pointed to "the definite lack of correlation between the strategic plans which Washington favors in the war on Japan and those to which London clings." No good is done, the editorial said, by disguising the conflict.

If there was an isolated instance, it would deserve no comment. It could be written off as one of those military disagreements bound to occur in any war and particularly in a war of global extent. The truth is, however, that it is in a familiar pattern. Recently an American official of considerable status returned from the Middle East with bitter tales of British intrigue that worked to our detriment. Our economic experts have come from Africa with accounts of how Great Britain is building a new empire in Africa, an empire that excludes our economic interests. In England you hear many complaints about Americans, particularly on WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 (AP)—Mrs. Lionel Atwill, divorced wife of the actor and formerly the wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, will be married March 1 to Capt. Alf Heiberg, Army Air Forces band leader, she disclosed today.

Mrs. Atwill, who met the band leader at a servicemen's party here about a year ago, said the wedding would take place at the Washington home of her mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury.

Mrs. Atwill first was married to Walter B. Brooks of Baltimore in 1911 and divorced him in Paris in 1919. Her marriage to Gen. MacArthur took place in 1922 at Palm Beach, Fla. She and the General were divorced in Reno in 1929. Shortly after that divorce she was married to the screen and stage actor, Lionel Atwill, whom she divorced last year.

PEOPLE LOSING PEACE, SAYS NORMAN THOMAS

Socialist Asserts Roosevelt Has Appeasement Policy Toward Stalin, Churchill.

The people are losing the peace as fast as the United Nations are winning the war, Norman Thomas, Socialist Party leader, told an audience of 600 last night at St. Louis House, 2845 Lafayette avenue. He puts blame for the situation on what he terms Roosevelt's appeasement policy toward Stalin and Churchill.

In the light of the Moscow-Cairo-Tehran declarations and accompanying events, Thomas said, Roosevelt is underwriting the Balkanization of Europe, leaving it to "sphere of influence" policies of Russia and England, and in Asia is underwriting the restoration of tottering empires against the will of the people to be governed.

A continuation of such a policy, he asserted, would doom the United States to another war within the next three decades, with Russia, China, or with Asiatic territories now considered colonial. Thomas thought the United States should formulate a foreign policy that will set a "contingent example," contingent on the establishment of positive, direct aims to be achieved.

"If what we want is peace, we must have mutual understanding and forgiveness for our enemies, substitute internationalism and supervised guidance for imperialism, and effect a co-operation between peoples that will be more than a police-force alliance," Thomas said. He advocated regional federations, which in turn would be bound together in a world federation to the destruction of power politics.

"If universal military conscription and competitive armaments continue after the end of the war, we have lost the peace," he concluded.

The meeting, at first scheduled for a basement hall, moved to larger quarters when the room overflowed.

In a radio speech over station KSD, yesterday afternoon, Thomas condemned administrative procedure that allowed James V. Duggan, director of the United States Bureau of Prisons, to head an inquiry into charges that inmates of the United States Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo., had been victims of brutality, stating that he felt no executive should be called on to head an official investigation of an institution under his own administration.

WELLER SAYS U. S. MUST SAFEGUARD PEACE IN PACIFIC

consist of fortifying islands near the Japanese mainland, thus surrounding the enemy near at hand and making it difficult for him to break out.

"In this war we have one case of a 'containing' type of defense, and that was Corregidor, unknown before Dec. 7, 1941, but now sacred," Weller said. "While Singapore and Hong Kong fell, the Rock held. Like Malta in the Mediterranean, it was a bulwark in the enemy's back, and it was finally necessary for the conqueror of Singapore to go to Bataan to quiet that fortress."

"What if we had had a dozen Corregidors? If we had, there would never have been a question of Pearl Harbor."

Australia's Sad Plight.
Weller told of the helplessness of Australia at the outbreak of war in the Pacific. He said Australia had only one fighter plane, a British Hurricane which had no guns. There was no airplane listening equipment.

"Australia was open and helpless. We threw what equipment we had into the Southwest Pacific. And Japan failed in her intentions to cut us from Asia with an iron curtain when its force bound to attack the Australian coast was defeated by United States naval units in the Battle of the Coral Sea."

Weller said the United States saved Australia and has since fortified islands throughout the area. Yet, this nation has made no move whatever to preserve these bases for future use in coping with Japan.

"We have allowed so much slack of rope in the Pacific that others have seen it and have begun to take it up," the speaker went on. He mentioned a recent pact between Australia and New Zealand, which would deny the United States claim to islands in that vicinity. He quoted a high Australian official that American desire for bases on that continent were "absurd."

Weller reviewed the history of the Japanese mandated islands, granted to Japan by Great Britain in the last war, and now, he pointed out that these islands, in the hands of Japan, effectively cut the United States off from its possessions in the Philippines.

"Correcting Past Blunders."
He said America gained no important strategic spots as result of its part in the last war, and now "a good many of our people are dying and we are making the greatest sacrifices of our resources in correcting our past blunders, and still we are asking nothing in return."

"We hear the argument that to maintain far away bases would be expensive. Wouldn't it be wise to give a little for American security—to hold under the American flag those places we have been forced to defend?"

"Many men have yet to die to correct our political errors of the last war. We must sacrifice blood and economic distortion for generations. I would like all of you to devote at least a segment of your mind to the political interest of your country abroad."

"Winning this war to get revenge against Japan is not half our task. We must not think of infantile vengeance. We must achieve a system to prevent another Pearl Harbor. This war must be given a permanent meaning—something more than we in this country have yet realized."

"It is hard to face the muzzles of the enemy's guns knowing that when you return home after the war, the whole job will have to be done over again some day by your own sons."

Tips on Saving Used Fats for Free Red Points

IT'S NEVER TOO BLACK OR TOO BURNED. Even if you have used your fat dozens of times... to fry onions or fish... it all produces a crystal-clear essential of ammunitions, medicines and other battle field needs. It's so urgently needed that the government has authorized your meat dealer to give you 2 red points free, and 4¢, for every pound of fat you turn in to him.

THERE'S NEVER TOO LITTLE TO SAVE! Enough sulfadiazine ointment that may mean life or death to 35 wounded men can be made from only one tablespoonful of used cooking fat! So scrape every drop out of your broiler, your roaster, your skillet. Melt down fat trimmings and table scraps. Skim soups and gravies. There's never too little to strain into your salvage can.

ANY SORT OF TIN CAN WILL DO! Don't think you need a coffee or shortening can to save fat in. Any tin can... soup, fruit or vegetable can... is okay. But please, don't use glass. It may break and hurt you when you pour in hot fat. And it almost always breaks in transportation, making the fat difficult to salvage. So save used fat in any tin can... every drop... every day! Then rush it to your meat dealer to help save your fighting men! Get busy today!

SELECTIVE BUYING IN MIXED STOCK TRADE

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP).—Assorted rails, gold mines, utilities and specialties rallied in today's stock market but many leaders failed to join rise.

Carriers, different most of the time, enjoyed a brief mid-flurry when the Senate decisively backed up the House in overriding the Argentine political rumblings. The influence of the congressional revolt seemed to have waned a bit and there was the usual lightening of commitments for the week end. Individual developments remained as a prop for favorites. Renewed Argentine political rumblings served to restrain some potential purchasers.

Trends were a shade uneven from the opening on and, at the last, while gains running to 2 or more points were in evidence, minus signs were plentiful. Dealings slackened at intervals.

Sales aggregated 800,186 shares compared with 1,162,110 shares yesterday.

The market was not as broad as yesterday. Of the 863 issues traded in today, 809 were higher, 301 lower and 253 unchanged. Twenty-nine made new 1943-44 highs and two new 1943-44 lows. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed unchanged at 51.4 per cent.

How Shares Moved.

At peak levels for 1943-44 were Delaware & Hudson, American Telephone & Telegraph, Public Service and Macy. American Distilling jumped several points on cash sales. Supported were Southern Railway, Homestake, Dome Mines, Hercules Motors, Rustless Steel, Western Union, Sears Roebuck and Columbia Gas. Large gains included Santa Fe, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Consolidated Edison, Pennsylvania and Douglas Aircraft.

Among curb advances were Electric Bond & Share, Cities Service, Cuban Atlantic Sugar, Glen Alden Coal and N. J. Zinc.

Another batch of regular dividends was helpful, but there were a few unexpected setbacks. Macy again was disappointed in the commercial investment trust market. A reduction of the Commercial Investment Trust from 75 to 60 cents, while not altogether unexpected, resulted in a stumble for this stock.

Day's 15 Leaders.

Missing Child Found Drowned.
BARNESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 25 (AP).—A doll clutched in her arms, 2-year-old Linda Moore was found today drowned in a rain-filled ravine yesterday. The child had been missing since Wednesday.

SERVES 22 STATES
(Pictures in Everyday Magazine)

Today, the second anniversary of the United States Coast Guard's assumption of responsibility for port security, finds Coast Guardsmen of the St. Louis Ninth Naval District patrolling inland waterways in 22 states, embracing the Mississippi River and all its navigable tributaries as far south as Baton Rouge, La.

In the two years that the Coast Guard, on presidential order, has had charge of port security, large numbers of former policemen and firemen have participated in what the Coast Guard reports has been "the biggest policing, inspecting and fire-fighting job in the world."

In St. Louis, the Coast Guard patrols a 16-mile stretch of waterfront on guard against fires in wharves and ships, and possible threats against the movement of war materials. The patrol affects both Missouri and Illinois shores of the river.

Coast Guardsmen inspect identification cards of all persons working on the waterfront. They also prevent taking of unauthorized photographs.

In addition to the force of regularly enlisted personnel, the Coast Guard is supplemented by temporary reservists, men from civilian life who give 48 hours each month to full Coast Guard duty. In St. Louis more than 400 temporary reservists are participating in this work.

On the occasion of the second anniversary of the assumption of port security duties, Capt. Roger C. Helmer, district Coast Guard officer, said: "The outstanding record of this district is a perfect testimonial to the patriotic efficiency of every officer and man assigned to port security, from those issuing identification cards to those having guns, guns, guns. However, we must not let this record lull us into complacency—for that is what our enemies want. Instead, let us take this occasion to rededicate our efforts to the multitudinous tasks of protecting the nation and fighting for victory."

more eloquently with each attempt. It really was so funny we all had to laugh. When Bill finally got back in line he was good and mad, and he said he couldn't see anything funny about it. It took us half an hour to feel our way out of the big orchard and down a few feet onto the so-called road, which was actually not much more than a furrow worn by Italian mule carts. There were knee-deep ruts and bucket-sized rocks. Once on the road, the column halted to let a train of pack mules pass. As we stood there, the thought occurred to all of us: "It's bad enough to be floundering around on the ground and mud, but now it'll be like groveling in a barnyard."

How to Fly

All You Have to Do Is Turn the Wheel

By George H. Hall

PROPHETS who predict the day is approaching when anyone who can operate an automobile can also, without more ado, fly an airplane, are chronologically off the beam. The day is already here.

There is at least one little ship, described officially as "fool resistant," which is easier to handle than an automobile and which appears to be just about as dangerous. Knowing virtually nothing about flying, I got in one of these planes recently with an instructor, and with a disturbing minimum of assistance took it up, cruised around at 3000 feet for half an hour and brought it down without ruffling my Windsor tie.

THIS WAS MY FIRST experience in an airplane since 1929. In the golden summer of that year, with a young woman companion, I paid a barnstorming pilot $2.50 for a quick ascension in a spavined old Waco biplane. Not long after, the young woman entered a nunnery, where she remains to this day, although I do not know whether our flight had anything to do with it. Anyway, that's all I knew about flying.

The little monoplane that bore me aloft the other day is called an Ercoupe. I was told it corresponds in quality to a Buick automobile. Oliver L. Parks, at whose airport on the East Side the plane is hangared and who hopes to sell thousands like it after the war, told me there would be 25,000 small planes owned privately in the St. Louis area by 1950. "I would say 50,000 except that you wouldn't believe me," he said.

TWO PERSONS sit side-by-side in the heated cockpit of the Ercoupe. The top and sides are enclosed in clear plastic. The seats are upholstered and you can stretch your feet as far as you want without having to worry about using them to push pedals. All the controls are on the dash board. Two wheels about the size of pie pans extend on tubes from the dashboard, and are geared together so that either occupant can drive. You steer the plane by turning the wheel as you do on an automobile. To ascend you pull it toward you; to descend you push it toward the dash board. The front wheel of the tricycle landing apparatus is geared to the steering wheels so that guiding the craft over the ground and in the air is the same. Moving the steering wheel in any direction requires a small fraction of the effort required to steer an automobile. The throttle is a rod which comes out of the center of the dash board. A lever actuating hydraulic brakes is next to it.

THE INSTRUCTOR was a man named Everett E. Hart, who told me he would operate the throttle and I would do the rest. We taxied through a series of mud puddles to the runway. Hart told me to drive down the middle of the runway and opened the throttle. When we were going about 50 miles an hour he said to pull back the wheel. We began to climb. After awhile he said to push the wheel forward until we leveled out. By adjusting a little crank it is possible to trim the ship according to the weight of the passengers. When this is done, the plane virtually flies itself and the aviator can relax with a book.

HART SAID THE PLANE was spin-proof and told me to pull the wheel all the way back while he cut the engine speed. The nose went up and the plane lost air speed, but instead of slipping off to one side or sliding back, it nosed over and dove forward. Hart said it would descend in a series of bounces. He added the plane was a little sluggish because of about 15 pounds of ice and frozen mud on each wing. It seemed extremely sensitive to the controls, however, and responded logically. Wide turns were accomplished without any difficulty but on very sharp turns I found it took some time to get accustomed to the position of the earth. The horizon would unaccountably jump up in the air.

WHILE WE WERE kiting about at 105 miles an hour Hart told me the plane could take off at 45 miles an hour and land at speeds from 45 to 90 miles an hour. It will travel about 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and will cost (after the war) something like $2690. In a residential section, it would require a runway about 1000 feet in length. It has a wingspread of 30 feet and can carry 65 pounds of baggage in addition to the two occupants. The plane is one of about 100 completed by an Eastern firm just before the war. Most people, Hart said, can learn to solo with less than the five hours minimum instruction required by the Government.

WHEN WE WERE READY to come in Hart said he would put the plane in a position for landing because this requires some judgment. About a quarter-mile from the field he said to aim the nose at the middle of the landing strip and in a few moments we had landed. Instead of running along the ground, as I had anticipated, the plane seemed at first to grind into the cinders. Hart said that happened because ice had frozen two of the landing wheels. He added that if the plane had been equipped with a two-wheel landing gear we would have flipped over. I told him I thought it was nice we hadn't.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM a girl, age 19, who was brought up in a wonderful home and with high ideals. A few months ago I started to work in a new company and there became attracted to a fellow of 21 whom at first I did not date because of his reputation.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

I do not think you should pull up stakes and go off to a strange city. There through sheer loneliness and the same lack of discrimination you might get in even deeper than you are at present, and be unable to make a comeback. As to marriage—this boy does not seem in any sense good husband material, and the two of you probably would continue to make the same mess of things and sink lower and lower. Your salvation, I think, lies in returning home. Make a clean breast of the entire matter to your parents, convince them of your sincere repentance and ask to be given a chance to prove yourself. Live as they have taught you to live, no looking back.

ENTANGLED.

As to marriage—this boy does not seem in any sense good husband material, and the two of you probably would continue to make the same mess of things and sink lower and lower. Your salvation, I think, lies in returning home. Make a clean breast of the entire matter to your parents, convince them of your sincere repentance and ask to be given a chance to prove yourself. Live as they have taught you to live, no looking back.

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE BEEN married four years and am still much in love with my husband. He's been in the Army nine months and we have exchanged daily letters. Out of a clear sky I received one today asking me to get a divorce. In it he told me that he thinks I'm a swell girl, he still likes me, but he has found another girl he's in love with. Shall I quit writing him and try to forget him? Do you think I should give him the divorce? I love him enough that if that's what he needs to make him happy I could make myself give it to him.

SOLDIER'S WIFE.

You might give him the divorce but I doubt if it would make him happy. Like many another man away from home and lonely, he has become infatuated with some girl, and suddenly decides he can't live without her. But if the wise wife back home will just sit tight, refuse the divorce and wait for her man to emerge from the rosy cloud of synthetic love, he will come to and thank her for the rest of his days. Trust his common sense and his love for you to eventually come to the rescue.

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE A FRIEND who is a very nice boy and I like him very much. The other fellows think he is sissy and call him all kinds of names, and it gets worse and worse all the time. He is a Christian boy and sings in the choir at his church, and he tries to be good and do right. He won't fight these other boys, just walks away and pretends he doesn't hear them. The way they treat him makes me mad, for he is a fine boy. What can he do to make these fellows shut up?

H. H.

On the strength of being called unchristian, I am forced to say that the only thing I can suggest is for your friend to turn around unexpectedly some fine day and punch a few noses. Then he will be left alone. How about giving him a few lessons in the gentle art of self-defense?

IN ANSWER TO "E. F. B.": Perhaps your pastor can help you to meet some woman of the right age at your church. Or you might join the Fireside Club, a non-sectarian group for single men and women past 30 years of age. For full information about this club call Will Logan, FO. 3022. You will be wise not to get involved with women through correspondence clubs. If your mail is being tampered with report it to the police.

IN ANSWER TO "In Love and Broken Hearted": You say you have been ideally happy before all this happened and know you could be happy again. Stick to that idea and make it come true. Refuse the divorce your husband wants on the basis of a brief infatuation; he will thank you with all his heart for refusing it, in another few months. As you suggest, keep right on fighting for what you know is right.

Soup Spoon Maneuver

By Emily Post

JUST why the men in a Fighter Squadron, overseas, are interested in the "proper maneuvering of a soup spoon" is not very clear, but since this is an apparently straight question sent from a definitely real squadron, the answer is as follows: Clear soup served in a soup plate should be sipped from the side of a spoon. (Or, if this is thought too "mimic," take a mouthful from nearer the tip.) Thick soup is eaten from the front end of the spoon—putting the whole of a small spoon, and the tip end half of a large spoon, into the mouth.

DEAR MRS. POST: What happens when three women—A, B, C, are talking and then joined by Mrs. D. "A" knows all; "B" is a very important personage. "A" introduced "C" and "D" but did not introduce "B" because she considered it was more flattering to take for granted that she needed no introduction. Was it wrong?

Answer: Decidedly, yes. In fact, Mrs. "D" should have been introduced first to Mrs. "B," and then to the others.

DEAR MRS. POST: When a divorce is granted because the husband has been in a mental institution for the allotted time required by law, may marriage announcements be sent out by the wife who is marrying again?

Answer: I think it would be better taste not to send them. On the other hand, if the bridegroom was never married before, they might be sent to his friends and relatives—for that matter to those few of hers who would not otherwise hear of the marriage for some time to come.

DEAR MRS. POST: What is your opinion of having writing paper marked Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and their address?

Answer: I think it not only strange, but that it sounds rather useless. Personally, I should prefer the regular house paper marked with only an address, which may always be used by all members of a family.

The Doctor Makes Food Experiment

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

I HAVE just concluded a dietetic experiment, undertaken for a group of students of nutrition, and since in some ways the results were surprising to me, I venture to lay them before you.

One day I faithfully made a list of every morsel I had to eat. After breakfast I wrote down the items and their weight. Same with lunch and dinner—l'après midi d'un dietician. I want to emphasize that I made no plans for what I should eat. I ate what was put before me or, in the case of lunch, what I chose. No foreordained plan was made for a balanced diet, or the inclusion of the vitamins or minerals or other protective food. It was as nearly as possible the same average kind of food I have on other days left to custom, appetite and chance.

Then I made a list of the food elements that are agreed upon as constituting a balanced diet, and the daily requirements by weight considered necessary by the best authorities.

HERE THEY ARE:

The basic foods—Protein, 50 to 100 grams; carbohydrate and fat, enough with protein to make up 1500 to 2500 calories.

Minerals—Salt, five grams; calcium, .45 gram; phosphorus, .36 gram; sulphur, 1 gram; iron, .006 gram; magnesium, iodine, etc., traces.

Vitamins—A, 1500 units; B, consisting of thiamine, 1 to 2 milligrams, and riboflavin, .002 gram; C, .06 gram; D (for adults), 3 units; nicotinic, .01 milligram; E, H, K, requirements not determined.

Some of the results surprised me. Protein intake. I had supposed I was eating about 2500 calories. I had believed the Government estimated allowances of 1500 calories a day for a sedentary bloke like me and 3000 for a worker were too low. But my calorie intake for that day which completely satisfied my appetite and made me comfortable was about 1500 calories.

I have always supposed I ate at least 150 grams of protein a day, and have been very scornful of strict nutritionists who say 50 to 70 grams are enough. I recognize that a man can live on 50 grams of protein a day, but did not think that was a desirable maximum.

My own intake amounted to only 73 grams. And I guess I do not eat much more other days.

THE OTHER CALCULATIONS

did not surprise me so much, but may be a surprise to others who are artificially stuffing themselves with vitamins, iron, etc. My iron requirement is 6 milligrams a day. I took in 20 times that amount! I got twice my iron requirement in my egg at breakfast. I got a little more calcium than I needed. My phosphorus intake was close to the minimum requirement. I was lower in that than anything.

As to vitamins, I am flooded with them. I took in 2890 of A, and I only needed 1500; enough B thiamine and riboflavin; three times as much C as requirements demand; and sunshine will give me plenty of D.

And again I emphasize I did not plan the meals to get a large vitamin or mineral content. They just came naturally in the food that was set before me.

Her Failures Helped Her Succeed

Analyze Your Failures and Profit Thereby, Says Olga Petrova, Who Did.

By Tom Bridges

JIM FARLEY has no monopoly on the use of green ink. Olga Petrova has been using it for years. The internationally known actress, playwright and author, who has been making St. Louis her headquarters during a series of lectures at Missouri colleges, adopted the custom when she observed that the signature of the letter offering her her first major role in the theater was sprawled across the bottom of the page in vivid green.

That was 40 years ago. It was November in England, where November at best are bad, and the young actress, known then in London's lesser music halls as Muriel Harding, was ill and her funds almost exhausted. She sought the advice of a physician.

"You must have nourishing food, and occasionally you should take a bit of bracing port. A sea voyage, perhaps, to get you away from the winter fogs." Such was the prescription given Petrova at a time when her total fortune amounted to no more than a few shillings and the prospects were as gloomy as the weather.

The letter signed in green ink, timed like the arrival of the hero in a Western thriller, saved the day. Would she consider an engagement with the Sidney Hyman Enterprises in South Africa at 20 pounds a week? She was waiting at the door of Hyman's London office long before the earliest clerk showed up the next morning.

Petrova's early life might have been a bed of roses if in her youth she had been willing to submerge her own ideas and individuality to the Victorian domination of a possessive father. But she was a willful child. Resentment welled up in her when she heard the patriarchal pronouncements: "As long as you live beneath my roof and eat my bread, I will exact obedience from you." Even then, she resolved to have her own roof and her own bread.

Today she has both. In fact, she has two roofs—one at a Long Island estate and another on the Riviera, in Southern France. Of the latter she has heard little since she deserted France for her adopted homeland, the United States, in 1939.

For the current lecture tour, which included appearances earlier this week at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, and Christian College, Columbia, Petrova used as her subject the title of her recently published autobiography, "Butter With My Bread."

Certainly one of the contributing factors to her success has been her unwillingness to succumb to failure. "Whenever I found an insurmountable barrier blocking my path, I simply detoured around it," she explains, "and the by-paths frequently proved to be pleasant roads."

of her father's choosing and arrived in London with less than six pounds. During eight months as a reporter for the London Tribune, in an era when a woman in a newspaper office was a rarity, she learned to cook and sew in order to stretch her salary of a pound a week.

To augment her income, Petrova accepted a position as a governess. One of the neighbors was the Marquis of Anglesey, who had converted the ancient chapel on his estate into a theater for amateur dramatic presentations. The young governess was invited to participate.

"That experience gave me new hope," Petrova said. "I wanted to write, and it occurred to me that the theater could furnish me the money to finance a writing career."

After weeks of trudging from manager to manager, she made her first appearance at Canterbury Music Hall in London, where patrons liked their entertainment spicy. The act was a colossal failure. When she walked onto the stage the rowdy boys in the balconies hurled at her what Petrova proclaimed her appearance. Her picture graced billboards in London and the provinces. Success brought her an invitation from Henry B. Harris and Jesse L. Lasky to cross the Atlantic to Broadway. She accepted.

Petrova calls her American debut at New York City in 1911, in "Folies Bergeres," her most successful failure. She received no barrage of missiles; in fact, no one so much as lifted a hand to give her perfunctory applause. But the failure didn't frighten her. "It might have caused me pain, but it didn't make me afraid," she said. "For I knew out of my own experience that no failure can be made to yield good fortune if a person has the will to find out why he has failed and the determination to make use of the knowledge he has learned through failure."

She persuaded her managers to give her a role in "The Quaker Girl," starring Ina Claire. She scored immediate success. The Shuberts starred her in "Fanny" and "The Revolt." Movie material from Long Island studios lured her to the screen in 1916, paying her a salary of $2500 a week.

But Petrova was dissatisfied with the scripts that were offered her, either for the legitimate stage or the screen. "I realized my limitations as an actress, and I refused to play roles with which I could not feel in sympathy." Her managers were exasperated. "Why don't you write your own plays?" they challenged.

So she did. Her moving pictures included "Daughter of Destiny," "The Orchid Lady," "Bridges Burned," and "More Truth Than Poetry." Her plays, in which she starred, were "The White Peacock," "Hurricane," and "What Do We Know?" While "Hurricane" was on tour in October, 1924, she appeared in it at the Shubert-Jefferson here in St. Louis.

Her short stories, now collected in a volume called "The Black Virgin," appeared in Smart Set and other popular magazines. Her poems were included in a number of anthologies of favorite, representative verse.

Petrova's acting career was never motivated by glamor. She went on the stage for the money she needed to be independent. By hard work, she gained top billing and a salary that ran into five figures weekly. When she accumulated her fortune, she left the stage and, as she says, started to live. That was 1928.

Inevitably a new acquaintance will ask her whether she ever intends to return to the stage. She shakes her head. "A person's magnetism wears out just as a magnet wears out. It's bound to." It's then that she speaks her poorest line. Though she will be 58 years old in May, she's still glamorous, still youthful.

Importance Of One Trick In Duplicate

By Ely Culbertson

A rubber bridge, the saving of one trick when the contract itself already is lost, is not a matter of extreme importance, but at duplicate that one trick saving may result in a high match-point score. For example:

The bidding:
1 spade 2 hearts 2 spades 3 hearts
4 spades 5 hearts Double Pass

West's double was of the "preventive" variety. He was not too satisfied with his own free raise on the first round and now wanted to prevent his partner from going to five spades. This, incidentally, was a sound thought on West's part since his side had already bid its limit.

Other South players also decided to bid five hearts, if only as a sacrifice, but they did not fare well going down two tricks. The 500-point penalty they paid was greater than the value of East-West's non-vulnerable game.

At this table South played the hand perfectly, and consequently went down only one trick. West opened the spade three; East won and shifted to the club jack. Declarer, knowing that East would not have led away from the king-jack, went right up with the club ace, drew trumps, ruffed the spade queen, and then led the ace and a low diamond. Declarer ruffed, and now that the hand was "stripped," carefully led the club 10. West could do no better (or worse) than to win with the king and return a club. Declarer, of course, allowed this lead to come to his own, and thus lost only one club trick.

Take My Word for It

By Frank Colby

SURPRISE WORD OF THE WEEK.

ONE of the strangest words in English is ANATHEMA. It leads a Jekyll-Hyde double life, and no man can say, seeing the word by itself, precisely what it means or how it should be pronounced.

To begin with, anathema is a Greek word meaning "to set up a votive offering; a thing accursed." This contradictory meaning is carried forward into the English, making it necessary to have two words, both spelled "anathema," and with utterly opposite meanings. And in order to tell one of these antonyms from the other, they have been given different pronunciations.

1. When the word is pronounced AN-uh-THEE-muh, it means "An offering consecrated to a deity or to a sacred purpose."
2. When it is pronounced u-NATH-ee-muh, the word means, "An ecclesiastical ban or curse; a malediction; a loathed thing or person."

How Did It Start?

liquor? Please discuss—A. L. Answer: Literally, doctor is a Latin word meaning "teacher." The word entered English as doctor, "a learned man," and later it was changed back to the Latin form doctor, but it meant "one qualified to teach."

When colleges were established, the academic title "doctor" signified that the holder had received a degree in medicine (M. D.), law etc.

The verb "to doctor" is a colloquialism, while "to doctor," in the sense of "tamper with," is near-slang. A physician is addressed as "doctor" simply because he holds the degree of Doctor of Medicine.
